HUGHES REQUESTS SENATE TO FOREGO AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

Parallel Investigation Would Hamper Department of Justice, He Declares.

PROMISES A FULL REPORT

Gregory Indorses His Attitude, and Committee Probably Will Heed Recommendation.

FIGHT IN SENATE ENDED

Compromise Reached and Funds Voted for War Inquiry Under Existing Authorization.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Following the passage by the Senate today by unanimous vote of a compromise substitute for the Chamberlain resolution for an investigation by the Committee on Military Affairs of certain activities of the War Department, a letter was made public in which Charles E. Hughes, special aircraft investigator for the Department of Justice, recommended that no parallel inquiry be undertaken by the Senate. As a result, doubt is entertained whether the Committee on Military Affairs will launch such an inquiry, although possessing authority to do so.

The resolution adopted by the Senate was offered by the Committee on Audit and Control as a substitute for the one put in a week ago authorizing the Military Affairs Committee to proceed with its inquiry into aircraft, ordnance, and the Quartermaster General's Department, and was the result of a compromise reached by the opposing factions.

It took the Senate only five minutes to dispose of the substitute resolution. Senator Thompson offered the substitute, saying it was supported by the entire Committee on Audit. Senator Martin, Democratic floor leader, urged adoption of the substitute.

"I have conferred with many members of the Senate on this resolution," he said. "Not only has there been no objection to it, but every one believes the inquiry, as outlined in the resolution, would be helpful."

Claim a Distinct Victory.

Advocates of the Chamberlain resolution, which was opposed by the President, regarded the Senate vote as a distinct victory. Senator Thompson of Kansas, Chairman of the Audit Committee, and the other Administration Democrats who fell into line for the inquiry allowed it to be known that they had done so to avoid an acrimonious debate. They preferred to give the authority asked by the Military Affairs Committee, they explained, than have an awkward fight on the floor of the Senate.

The Senate vote came upon a resolution to amend Resolution No. 48, adopted last December, by which the Military Affairs Committee was empowered to hold "hearings in connection with any subject that may be pending" and that the committee might sit during recess of Congress. Under this broad authority the committee conducted its sweeping inquiry last Winter. But it needed authorization for funds to proceed further. This was given today, when the substitute resolution was passed, as follows:

"Resolved, That any expenses incurred by the Committee on Military Affairs under the provisions of Senate Resolution 48, heretofore adopted, including the expense of employing assistants and traveling expenses, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate."

That resolution became a substitute for the one reported favorably by the majority of the Audit Committee, which specifically authorizied an inquiry into aircraft, ordnance, and the Quartermaster General's Department. The Military Affairs Committee already had power to conduct an investigation into any phase of war activity. With the authorization for expenses given today, the committee is at liberty to project unrestricted inquiry.

But after the adoption of the substitute resolution it became doubtful if the committee would, after all, use the authority given to it. This developed after the receipt by Senator Chamberlain of a letter from Attorney General Gregory, inclosing one from Mr. Hughes, in which the latter urged that there be no "parallel investigation."

Mr. Hughes argued—and was supported in his attitude by Mr. Gregory—that the Department of Justice wanted to go into an exhaustive inquiry, embracing the entire aircraft situation, and that it might be embarrassed if the Military Affairs Committee undertook an inquiry along similar lines.

Mr. Gregory's Letter.

The letter from Mr. Gregory, which was the outcome of a conference with Mr. Chamberlain follows:

Washington, May 21, 1918.
Hon. George E. Chamberlain, United States Senate.

My Dear Senator: At an interview between you, Judge Hughes, and myself on last Saturday you asked what would be the scope of our pending inquiry into the aircraft problem, and also indicated that you would like to know what we thought might be the effect upon our work of an investigation by a committee of the Senate into the aircraft program. Subsequently I suggested that Judge Hughes write me a letter embodying his ideas on the two points involved. I herewith inclose copy of his letter, and will state that I agree with the views therein expressed. Respectfully yours,
T. M. GREGORY, Attorney General.

Letter from Mr. Hughes.

The letter of Mr. Hughes follows:

Ask Shipyards to Make July 4 Biggest of Launching Days

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Every shipyard in the United States was asked by telegraph tonight to speed up production and make July 4 the greatest ship launching day in the history of the world.

Commissioner Colby and C. M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, will be in San Francisco for the launching of nine ships in yards there.

Some of the vessels will be destroyers for the navy and others steamers for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the launchings being a significant reminder of the overseas traffic under convoy which is playing so great a part in the world war.

Chairman Hurley is disposed to make the "Liberty Launchings" a series of notable celebrations in all yards, as a peculiarly fitting way to commemorate the signing of the Declaration of Independence. President Wilson may be asked to participate.

RED CROSS TOTAL TOPS $11,000,000

WARBURG EXPECTS SUCCESS

Industrial Drive and House Canvass Barely Under Way—Many Big Gifts Still Looked For.

New York's total for the $100,000,000 Red Cross fund was $11,358,457 at noon yesterday. The sum reported for the last twenty-four hours was $3,078,140. This was for Manhattan only, the returns from Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Richmond not having been received.

The largest individual contribution received yesterday was $200,000 from John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Financial institutions, which began to contribute yesterday on receipt of word from Washington that contributions up to 1 per cent. of their capital were legal, gave $780,000 toward the total.

The falling off in the rate of contributions, as reported yesterday, in spite of the fact that it was the first day of large contributions from the banks, caused the Red Cross leaders to call for increased energy from all Red Cross workers, numbering more than 100,000, in this city, in order to make sure that New York City will go well over its minimum of $25,000,000. If the rate for the first three days is merely sustained, and not improved upon, New York will barely meet the expectations of the National Red Cross. In view of the power added to the drive here by President Wilson's personal participation in it, Red Cross leaders have hoped, and still hope, that New York City's showing will far exceed its quota.

Industrial Campaign Just Started.

It is believed that the last few days of the drive will produce money at a much more rapid rate, in view of the fact that the industrial campaign and the house-to-house canvass have barely got under way, while big contributions are still expected from many individuals and from corporations and financial institutions.

Felix M. Warburg, who presided at the meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, where the totals were reported yesterday, said:

"I believe that we are certain to reach our total for New York City of $25,000,000; but we had hoped to go over the top, and we ought to do so. If the Government decides to send a large expedition to Russia—the President told us on Saturday night that we are to stand by Russia—the amounts we are raising, however large they may seem, would be small compared to our necessities. I hope that your efforts, successful so far, will continue."

Jacob H. Schiff, for Committee No. 26, reported among other contributions the sum of $25,000 from the Delaware & Hudson Coal Company, and continued:

"You see, the railroads cannot, or will not, give to us, but our good friend, Mr. Loree, has invented a way to take $25,000 out of his coal company and give it to us."

Colonel Thompson, for the Corporations Division, reported $1,207,563 for the day, and a total to date of $3,499,151.

Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the Red Cross, who has received several requests from corporations for advice, made the following statement yesterday:

"With my knowledge of the situation and all that is involved, if I were the head of a corporation I would feel that my responsibility for the protection of my stockholders would not be discharged until I had recommended to my Board of Directors that a contribution be made by the corporation to the American Red Cross."

Contributions by Teams.

M'ADOO SELECTING RAILROAD CHIEFS; MANY TO KEEP JOBS

INSISTS ON UNIFIED CONTROL

Director General Holds That Efficiency Can Be Attained in No Other Way.

CHANGES TO BE GRADUAL

Regional Heads to Recommend New Managers—Meanwhile Presidents Hold Over.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22. — Additional steps were taken today in furtherance of the program of the Railroad Administration to place a Federal manager in charge of the operation of each railroad now under its jurisdiction, and within a few weeks the Government will be in complete control of all decisions involving the use of physical properties of the various systems.

Orders relating to operation will then be issued and put into effect through agents answerable for their acts only to the Government, and who have no financial connection with the private corporations. The belief was expressed today that this course would remove the last obstacle in the way of a speedy carrying out of instructions which might, in the belief of Director General McAdoo promote the most efficient use of the railroads as a single carrying system.

Pending the selection of the Federal managers, the Director General today requested the railroad Presidents to continue temporarily with their duties. It is probable that many of them will become Federal managers, if they are willing to sever their connections with the railroad corporations and accept the pay which the Government may allow.

Rests with Regional Directors.

Such selections, however, will be made largely upon the recommendation of the Regional Directors who have been appointed by Mr. McAdoo as the Government agents to whom the Federal Managers are to report. The appointments will be made as rapidly as Mr. McAdoo is able to consult with the members of his Advisory Council and reach a decision. It is probable, however, that the appointments will be announced one at a time and that the new policy will be put into effect gradually in this way.

The Railroad Administration, it was said today, has been making a careful study of the question from the viewpoint of obtaining the maximum of results in the matter of rapid transportation, and that the Presidents who would be selected as Federal managers would be those who had displayed the greatest zeal in co-operating with the Government. Where there has been evidence of friction and a tendency on the part of any executive to clash with the Government policies a new régime will be set up.

That there have been instances of this kind is not officially denied. In fact it is intimated that in the present move the Railroad Administration is not only seeking complete federalization of the railroads, but the elimination of all who have clung to old policies in face of orders from the Government to an extent that has hindered the Railroad Administration in its work.

It is held that the Federal Government has assumed the responsibility of giving the nation the most efficient railroad service, and that it is unwilling to permit any situation which might, in the opinion of the Railroad Administration, "throw a monkey wrench" into its plans, despite the fact that the railroad officials thus accused might feel that they were acting in the best interests of all.

McAdoo's Purpose Clear.

Mr. McAdoo recently made it evident that he believed in a complete federalization of the railroads, where operation was concerned at least, when he insisted that all of the members of his Advisory Council end their relations with the private railroad corporations which had employed them and take up their duties solely as employes of the Government. His next step was to extend this policy to the Regional Directors, who do not have offices here but are considered by him as a most important wing of his operating staff.

The decision to bring operating heads of each railroad under a like ruling was delayed for some time to determine how the situation would work out. Incidents which came to the attention of the Railroad Administration from time to time, however, are said to have brought about the decision announced yesterday.

It is not the intention of the Railroad Administration to make an end of the executives who have been deposed, and where they are not appointed as Federal managers there will be no objection to their retention as heads of the corporations in charge of financial problems. They will thus be in charge of negotiations which are carried on with the Government agents in connection with the rentals which shall be paid to the railroads by the Government and the use to which such moneys shall be put, as well as scores of other important policies concerning the future of the roads.

But the Government will insist that the remuneration paid to these executives, who are not retained as Federal Managers, shall be paid by the corpora-

Allied Envoys Call Treaty by Rumania Null and Void

PARIS, May 22.—An official note has been issued giving the reply of the French, British, Italian, and American Ministers to a letter from Constantian Arion, the Rumanian Foreign Minister, informing them that peace had been signed between Rumania and the Central Powers.

The four Ministers say that while they must leave to their Governments the exact definition of their point of view, they are obliged to declare that they regard the stipulations of the treaty null and void, "as contrary to principles, the violation of which compelled the Entente to take up arms, as well as the rights of the powers we represent."

AMERICA MAY BUY RUSSIA'S STORES

KERENSKY FOR SIBERIA?

Suggestion That He Is Going to Organize Conservative Elements Gathering There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The allied Governments apparently are working at cross purposes with regard to the proposal to build up Russia and bring her back as a national entity. The plan of Great Britain and France contemplates military action. Several suggestions are under consideration by the United States Government, it was learned today, but all of these are understood to contemplate Russian upbuilding by peaceful means. There seems to be no movement to effect a compromise that will insure active co-operation between the allied nations with the common object of realizing Russian national aspirations and bringing that country back into the war as a powerful force that will aid the cause of the Governments arrayed against the Central Powers.

Officials admitted today that they were giving consideration to several proposals to help Russia. One phase of the program contemplates the restoration of the Trans-Siberian Railway so as to insure the better shipment of relief supplies through Siberia into European Russia. Members and engineers of the American Railway Commission, who went to Japan when the Bolshevist Government obtained control, are reported to be returning to Siberia with the intention of going to Valogda, where the Bolshevist Government has been established and where David R. Francis, the American Ambassador, and other allied diplomatic representatives are now residing. The commission will consult with Ambassador Francis with a view to arranging a plan for improving Siberian railway facilities.

Talk of Wholesale Purchase.

Another scheme, said to be under serious consideration, contemplates the effective use of the American Red Cross in relieving distress in Russian territory. The Government is said also to be considering a proposal to purchase war supplies available in Russia in order to prevent them from falling into the possession of Germany. An enormous expenditure of money would be required for this purpose.

An unconfirmed report in connection with it is that the plan of the Administration for raising revenues, amounting to between $31,000,000,000 and $33,000,000,000, partly through the imposition of increased direct taxes, contemplates these purchases in Russia. The supplies reported to be available include cotton and oil. Germany needs these commodities badly and will go to extremes to obtain them. It was intimated today that Southern Congressmen will be disposed to object strenuously to the purchase of the Russian cotton, which, they contend, would interfere with disposing of their own cotton crop.

The object of these several schemes to aid Russia is to relieve the distress in that country with the possible advantage of earning the gratitude of the Russian people who might be disposed to show a friendly feeling toward the United States and the Allies in the struggle with the Central Powers. As far as known no proposal that contemplates the use of a military force to assist the Russian people to maintain a stable central Government or a series of local governments has appealed to the United States. Nor is there any assurance that any immediate action on the part of the United States in regard to any plan is likely. Great Britain and France are anxious to do something at once, as they hold that delay will work to the advantage of Germany. There is nothing to show that the Washington Government has in any degree modified the position taken toward the recent Japanese proposal to send troops into Siberia that the use of force on Russian territory would drive the Russian people to the side of the Germans.

It is now contended in some interested quarters that conditions have changed in Russia, and the arguments advanced by the United States at the time of the Japanese suggestion do not apply to the present situation. Germany's excesses in Russia have so angered the people that they are willing to adopt almost any measures that will bring relief from the current intolerable state of affairs. This may not apply to the active Bolshevist elements which wish to maintain control of the Government in spite of the fact that they have the support of only a small proportion of the people. It appears to apply, however, to the great middle class, and peasant farm-

2,078,223 NOW IN AMERICAN ARMY; MILLION TRAINED WAITING TO SAIL; GERMAN DRIVE IS EXPECTED IN JUNE

TROOPS TRANSPORTED FAST

90,000 Sailed in Ten Days in May, Caldwell Tells the House.

ALL THOROUGHLY EQUIPPED

BRITISH EFFORT EXCELLED

Our Front and Force Abroad Bigger in Ten Months Than Was Ally's in Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Representative Charles Pope Caldwell of New York, Democratic member of the Committee on Military Affairs, placed before the House this afternoon a comprehensive outline of the War Department's military program and accomplishments.

Mr. Caldwell's address resulted from an interchange of letters with Secretary Baker. The statements in it were approved by the War Department, and were regarded as a semi-official pronouncement on its affairs. He said that in a year, the American Army would be 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 strong. He declared there were at present 2,078,223 officers and men under arms, of whom more than 500,000 were in France, and 1,000,000 additional were amply trained to be sent to France as fast as shipping space could be provided.

The United States, said Mr. Caldwell, had raised and sent to the fighting lines in ten months an army larger than England had found herself able to provide in a year, despite the fact that 3,000 miles of submarine-infested Atlantic separated America from France, as against 30 miles of the English Channel.

90,000 Went in Ten Days.

During the first ten days of May, the Representative said, the United States sent 90,000 men to Europe.

Mr. Caldwell went into a detailed comparison of the man-power strength of the Central Powers and the allied nations, estimating that the maximum total of men available to the enemy for service was 18,360,000, and the number for the Allies was 68,879,500. He said that the United States itself could raise 5,000,000 men this year without going outside Class 1 of the draft.

"Washington, D. C., May 3, 1918.

"My Dear Mr. Caldwell:

"I have read with interest and appreciation your speech in the House on the subject of aircraft, and am writing this note to thank you for taking the trouble to look into the situation and speak so sympathetically and helpfully. On this and all other parts of the program which the War Department is carrying out, we are, of course, anxious to have real facts carefully investigated and frankly stated, and I know of no more useful service than so candid a statement as you have made on the subject.

"The country would be helped if you can find it possible from time to time to get into the Congressional Record the result of similar inquiries in other parts of the world, and as you are a member of the Committee on Military Affairs and, therefore, have constant contact with the subject, it may be that you will find it possible to do this.

"In the meantime, I am sure that you will feel at liberty to call on me for any information I can secure for you on any subject that you feel inclined to investigate. Cordially,

"NEWTON D. BAKER,

Praises Baker's Keenness.

"While I have found it impossible to agree with Mr. Baker on many details," said Mr. Caldwell, "I must say that I have found him to have the keenest mind of any man in public life that it has ever been my pleasure to come into intimate association with. I have never yet cross-examined a man who was more thoroughly familiar with his subject, more exact in his choice of words, to differentiate and shade his meaning, quicker in his responses, or who had a better poise than displayed by Secretary Baker when under fire in the House and Senate Military Committees.

"At the outset let me say frankly that we have made mistakes, yes, grievous mistakes, and had our foresight been as good as the aftersight of our critics we might have accomplished more. But notwithstanding these mistakes and omissions America has done her share—indeed, more than her share, for she has done many times more than any of our allies suspected that she was capable of doing and more than the greatest enthusiast in America hoped she could do.

"America has raised and equipped a bigger army in a shorter time and now holds a greater section of the fighting front, transporting her troops 3,000 miles across an infested sea in ten months, than England was capable of

American Air Squadrons Go Out with French; 97 of Foe's Airplanes Brought Down in 4 Days

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 22, (Associated Press.)—American air squadrons have been engaged, in participation with the French, in bombing operations behind the German lines. These operations are being carried out on a very large scale. At one time recently 120 allied machines were flying at the same moment in bombing work.

Records have just reached the correspondent of the air activities along the French between May 15 and 18, since the weather became again favorable for flying, which reveal the intensive aerial work of the character noted. In this period 105 aerial combats were fought in the course of patrols. Thirty-seven German machines were destroyed, sixty others were forced to land, badly damaged, within their own lines, and eight captive balloons were burned.

On the night of May 15 no less than 120 airplanes were in the air at the same moment bombarding a large number of towns and villages in German-held territory, causing fires and explosions everywhere. American and Italian squadrons participated in these operations.

On May 16 the broad daylight work continued, the bombing machines being protected by seventy-five chasers, which swept all the enemy aircraft out of the skies over a large space.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 22, (Associated Press.)—Germans captured by the French testify to the brilliant work of the allied aviators, who, the prisoners say, leave the Germans no peace. Fears are expressed regarding future operations by allied airmen on the Rhine cities, which they believe will be laid in ruins. The Germans say that their anti-aircraft defenses are insufficient to prevent the allied raids.

LONDON, May 22.—Twelve German airplanes were brought down in Monday's air fighting by British aviators, while gunfire accounted for another, and an additional two were driven down out of control. An official announcement of the day's activities says:

> Balloons and airplanes were again very active on Monday. Several long distance reconnoissances were completed.
>
> Twelve German airplanes were brought down in the air fighting, two others were driven down out of control, and another was brought down by gunfire. Two hostile balloons also were destroyed. Four British airplanes are missing.

POLA RAID HEROES NEVER CAME BACK

ALL MAY BE PRISONERS

Believed to Have Blown Up Their Boat After Torpedoing Dreadnought.

ITALIAN NAVAL HEADQUARTERS, May 18, (Associated Press.)—The details of the recent Italian naval exploit at Pola show that it was one of the most audacious feats of the war, worthy to rank with that of the British at Zeebrugge and that of the Merrimac at Santiago.

Plans were long matured by Lieutenant Commander Pellegrini, who adopted unusual secrecy to safeguard the project. To divert attention he took service in the trenches on the Piave, and when ready to start gave out that he was going to visit his friends. He was accompanied by another officer and two sailors.

The party was escorted by destroyers and arrived at Pola at 2 o'clock in the morning. It was very dark, as the moon had been down two hours. A light wind blew offshore, which prevented the sounds of preparation going landward. The entrance of the channel was 400 yards across, with a long neck leading into the great harbor, in which lay Austria's fleet of battleships, cruisers, and destroyers, encircled by a frowning terrace of land batteries.

In the obscurity the guard ship at the entrance was dimly visible swung to one side, the guards apparently asleep. There was complete lack of watchfulness.

Final preparation was made for a dash in the darkness. Commander Pellegrini and his companions put on rubber suits which could be inflated. The plan was to discharge torpedoes at the big ship, then blow up their own craft, jump overboard, and await capture or drowning. All realized that there was practically no chance for returning alive.

How they encountered three successive lines of defense, first a guard ship, then a line of wooden buoys marking a chain of mines and then a heavy steel net strung from bank to bank, and how they were able to penetrate these obstructions must remain a mystery, particularly as to the steel net, which was apparently an impossible barrier.

The escort waited almost an hour, when the silence was suddenly broken by two distinct explosions of torpedoes, followed by the sound of an alarm gun in the inner harbor. Soon after two signals of parti-colored lights slowly rose from the centre of the harbor, showing that Commander Pellegrini had penetrated to the very heart of the fleet, and was sending signals from the midst of it.

The first signal meant "have torpedoed a battleship," and the second

BRITISH VICTORS IN SERIES OF RAIDS

ARTILLERY IS STILL ACTIVE

Very Violent in Region Southeast of Amiens, but No Infantry Action Follows.

LONDON, May 22.—Raiding operations were the principal features of the fighting on the British front last night and today.

British detachments, in night trench attacks north of the Ypres-Comines Canal, southeast of Arras and in the neighborhood of Hebuterne [north of Albert] captured a number of prisoners.

Last night and this morning the Germans made ineffectual attempts to enter the British trenches north of Albert.

Elsewhere the fighting was confined to artillery actions. The Germans have again directed a heavy gas bombardment against the areas to the northeast of Bethune.

The day report reads:

> A number of successful raids were carried out by us last night on different parts of the front. In the sector southeast of Arras our troops entered the German trenches at two points and captured fourteen prisoners and a machine gun. Other raiding parties brought back a few prisoners from the enemy's positions in the neighborhood of Locon and in the sector between the Forest of Nieppe and Meteren.
>
> North of the Ypres-Comines Canal sixteen prisoners were captured by us. A hostile raiding party approached our lines last night north of Albert. It was repulsed.
>
> The enemy's artillery showed some activity during the night in the neighborhood of Dernancourt and considerable activity east of the Forest of Nieppe. The sector northeast of Bethune was heavily bombarded with gas shells.

The night bulletin from Field Marshal Haig says:

> Early this morning the enemy made a second attempt to raid our positions southeast of Mesnil, [north of Albert] but was repulsed.
>
> Another successful raid, in addition to those reported this morning, was carried out by us last night in the neighborhood of Hebuterne [north of Albert.] Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy in these encounters, and we captured a few prisoners.
>
> On the remainder of the front there was nothing beyond artillery activity on both sides in the different sectors.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 21.—On April 15 the Germans began a withdrawal of divisions from their front for the big drive with the purpose of reconstruction. Information here is that it takes five to seven weeks for this work.

In the beginning of the Somme drive the German command used forty-five divisions. This number had been withdrawn for reconstruction by about April 21. About a week ago the Germans withdrew crack divisions for the purpose of training for a period estimated at three and four weeks. These divisions were not so badly chewed up.

These factors lead to the estimate that the Germans will be ready for another drive in the first week of June on the same scale as the one that started on March 21. On a sliding scale of withdrawals of divisions for rehabilitation the Germans would be able to keep up the same supply of man power.

Starting the new offensive before the first week of June, it is believed, would mean they would not be able to hurl the same force against the allied lines. No doubt is entertained that the Germans are planning a new drive and it is not believed that they will postpone it any longer than is necessary to put the military machine in shape.

The German High Command is under tremendous pressure of German public opinion to do something. Frequent reports have been received of dissatisfaction with the results of the recent drive, as well as with the continuing losses on the western front. Recently captured Germans say the army generally does not consider the gains of March and April worth the price paid for them.

Tobacco Ration for Our Men.

A wave of joy swept through the American army today when it was announced throughout our forces that henceforth the War Department would issue tobacco rations. This step has been long hoped for by the soldiers and recommended by all officers from corporals to General Pershing.

Since the American army has been in France various "smoke funds" raised in America have scored results conspicuous by their absence. On trips that have taken me along practically all the American lines in France I have seen two instances of tobacco being given them. As a rule, they have paid for it, and incidentally paid well. The United States Army commissary, it is true, supplies soldiers with tobacco at cost, but only a small percentage of the doughboys can go to the commissaries from day to day.

Tobacco sold to the soldiers by the Y. M. C. A. is sold at American retail prices. A soldier used to smoking a good deal finds buying his supply from the Y. M. C. A. a heavy tax on his spending money. For instance, a well-known brand of American cigarettes, selling at the commissary for 8 cents, always costs 15 cents at the Y. M. C. A., the same as the price at retail in America. Tobacco prices of the Y. M. C. A. have often been a source of complaint by soldiers. I have met personally with many instances of this.

French tobacco is not liked by our soldiers, and also is high in price. Another factor is that many of our soldiers are serving with the British and French, where the commissary service is not the same as on the American sector.

As officially announced, the tobacco ration is four-tenths of an ounce per day, with 100 cigarette papers supplied for each four ounces of tobacco. An alternative to this ration will be four ready-made cigarettes, or four-tenths of an ounce of chewing tobacco. The doughboy with a pal who doesn't smoke will probably have a good chance to increase his ration on the side. The soldiers, of course, will not pay for this tobacco. The French and British armies have a tobacco ration.

New Plan Insures Prompt Delivery.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Shipments of tobacco to the American troops abroad already have gone forward. War Department officials said today. Extensive purchases have been made to insure a steady supply.

Details of distribution have been left to the Quartermaster forces in France. The men may draw their new ration in cigarette tobacco and papers in plug tobacco for chewing, or for use in pipes or cigarettes, as already ruled.

An announcement will soon be made giving details of the plan for distribution. Officers recognize the fact that the allowance made is somewhat limited; but since the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and commissary agencies are available, where the allowance can be supplemented by the troops at their own expense, there is no prospect of the soldiers going without what they need.

One effect of making tobacco a part of the regular ration is to insure its prompt delivery to the men, no matter where they may be. In taking this action the War Department obligates itself to get smoking materials to the troops as much as it is already obligated to feed them in every emergency.

REHEARSING FAR BEHIND LINE.

Washington Hears Some German Divisions Are Stronger Than in March.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Word has reached Washington through official channels that the German commanders are rehearsing men fifty to seventy-five miles behind their own lines in France and Flanders in preparation for their next drive against the allied forces.

The German divisions which were weakened or depleted in the offensive which was begun on March 21 have been brought up to full strength, and information has reached Washington from France indicating that some of these divisions are stronger than they were when the March offensive began.

Y. M. C. A.'S "SMOKE" PRICES.

Officials Here Think They Are Not Higher Than Government's.

At the headquarters of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. it was admitted yesterday that there had been statements to the effect that the association huts were charging higher prices for tobacco than other canteen units, but members of the council said that they did not believe that such was the case.

T. W. D. Turner said that the Quartermaster's Department could, of course, sell a box of cigars at a cheaper rate than the association's retail price. He said that he believed some of the soldiers had noted this and started talking.

"The Y. M. C. A. does not want to make a profit," he said, "out of the tobacco exchanges established by it under General Pershing's orders, and whenever a profit is made the money is refunded as justly as the association is able to refund it in the form of sporting goods, games, &c." It was pointed out at the offices that the Government was unable to give the Y. M. C. A. shipping space at certain times and that it was forced to go to the open market for it.

The War Work Council has sent a cable to the Y. M. C. A. headquarters in Paris asking for the exact price at which each article is sold through the association's exchanges.

Following is the statement:

GUN DUELS ON FRENCH FRONT.

Artillery Actions Violent Along the Battle Line Southeast of Amiens.

PARIS, May 22.—Violent artillery actions were in progress last night on the French front southeast of Amiens, extending from Hailles, on the Avre, to Plemont, west of Noyon. Patrols were active along the whole Ailette front.

The text of the day bulletin follows:

> The night was marked by violent artillery action in the region of Hailles, Senecat Wood, Rouvray, and Plemont. There was great patrol and reconnoissance activity along the whole Ailette front.
>
> French troops raided the enemy lines west of Maisons de Champagne. Two German surprise attacks were repulsed in the Woevre and Lorraine.

> There were reciprocal artillery engagements at divers points on the Somme and Oise fronts. But there were no infantry actions.

ALLIED GAINS HAMPER FOE.

German Plans Deranged by Reverses in Flanders and Before Amiens.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 22, (Associated Press.)—While awaiting the opening of the expected new German offensive the French and British are creating great confusion in the German plans by local operations, which already have brought about an improvement in their defensive positions.

The Germans had hoped to have positions at solid points on the Flanders hills, on the Villers-Bretonneux plateau, and on the Grivesnes and Mailly-Raineval heights, and the Le Plemont and Renaud hills from which to launch their attack. Not only have these positions remained in the hands of the allied troops, but in the vicinity of them the French and British have recently gained ground.

German prisoners assert that Emperor William hesitated a long time before starting the offensive this year, but that General Ludendorff obtained the upper hand by promising to force a peace by beating the Allies by Easter. The Crown Prince, with the military caste in Germany, they say, succeeded in ejecting Rudolph von Valentini from power after he had predicted a catastrophe for the German arms.

Von Valentini was Chief of Emperor William's Civil Cabinet and was replaced last September by von Berg. Von Valentini's removal was hailed by the Pan-German newspapers as a triumph for their cause.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

An interesting situation is developing in the Near East which has been interpreted as bringing danger to the British operations along the Tigris north of Bagdad. The Turks, moving southward from Batoum and Kars after the collapse of the Russian forces in the Caucusus, are officially reported to have passed beyond Lake Van, moving eastward toward Lake Urmia, which is just west of the Persian town of Tabriz, and to have occupied the towns of Ushnu, about twenty-five miles southwest of Lake Urmia and also Soujbulak, about fifty miles directly south of the lake. The presumption is that the object of this force is to get around the British right flank, and to strike in the rear of the British forces which are now many miles north of Bagdad, and are steadily advancing toward Mosul.

This is, of course, a possibility though one that seems, from such information as we have, to be a very distant one.

The country over which the Turks are passing is, in the first place, the most difficult in this entire theatre. There are very few roads, no railroads, but a wealth of heavily jumbled very high mountains. In such a country it is almost impossible to transport any amount of artillery north and south. Practically all of the roads, such as they are, run east and west, so that even the sparse communications which exist are not available. This greatly restricts the food supplies which can be brought up, and this alone automatically places a limit on the number of soldiers that can be used.

Again, between Persia and the plain of Mesopotamia there is an almost solid and heavy mountain wall, which is practically impassable. The Russians tried to force their way through it for many months. In 1915 they failed completely, and in 1916 they were successful only because the British were able to throw a column squarely across the Turks' line of communication and cut off their supplies.

This line at that time was the main highway between Bagdad and Teheran. This road passes through the mountain pass at Khanikin, which is the only break in the mountain wall for many miles. It is an exceptionally easy place to guard. In fact, in 1915 the Russians reached the very door of this gateway and were unable to force their way through.

In brief, then, the situation in Persia is that the Turks can have but a few small columns, inadequately munitioned and practically without artillery, which columns are forcing their way across mountains that offer no facilities for movement, while imposing every difficulty. These columns, working in such an impossible country, are still nearly 200 miles from the Tigris at the nearest point, and are meeting opposition, more or less inefficient and disorganized, it is true, but sufficient to delay them and cause considerable trouble. They must, before they can become a real menace, negotiate the very difficult pass at Khanikin, force its passage, and then descend into the plain.

The British defense against such an operation does not promise to be particularly difficult. The British, we may be sure, are fully alive to the situation. They know that the Turk can advance only along certain well defined lines and that all that it will be necessary to do will be to block these lines and the advance must come to an end. The British base is at Basra, near the head of the Persian Gulf, and into this base are constantly being fed from India additional men and a stream of supplies which so far in this campaign have proved entirely adequate.

At the first intimation that the Turks were becoming dangerous, a part of this reserve force at Basra could and would be sent to the defense of Khanikin. This force would have behind it good lines of supply, the Tigris River and the main highway east from Bagdad, while the Turks would be struggling constantly to get even the means of livelihood up to their troops. The question of artillery would be almost entirely beyond them. The Turks would not be much good in a fight of this kind. The best Turkish army and the only army that had any military value was badly cut up at Gallipoli and is now serving with fair distinction in Palestine. The Mesopotamian army is utterly without merit. It is incapable of offering to the British advance any serious opposition.

On the whole, therefore, while the situation east of the Mesopotamian border is interesting, it is still a long way from causing the British any uneasiness.

In the meantime, the British have not for a moment halted their advance. On the 11th of May their most northerly column had reached as far as the Little Zab River, about sixty miles from Mosul. This, however, was in all probability not the main body, but merely a flanking column sent out to prevent the Turks from turning the British right. The main body would naturally follow the main line of supply, the Tigris River. This body we last heard of at Tekrit, 120 miles from Mosul, but yesterday we learned that they had advanced up the Tigris, just as soon as the column on the right indicated that the way was clear. They are now at Fatha, about ten miles from the junction of the Zab and the Tigris, with the way apparently open to them for a still further advance as soon as a flow of supplies has been assured.

The Turks have absolutely gone to pieces in this theatre, having lost much of their artillery and practically all of their power of resistance. The only apparent limitation to the British advance is the speed of their own supply columns.

ers and small merchants who hope for peace but do not want a peace that will bring German rule.

Nothing, however, has been done by the allied nations, and fear is expressed that it soon will be too late for action that will prevent Russia from becoming vassal to Germany.

Former Premier Kerensky's Trip.

It is believed in well-informed circles here that the movements of Alexander Kerensky, technically Premier of Russia, whose Provisional Government was deprived of power by the Bolsheviki, are connected with the plans of the Allies concerning Russia. The most generally accepted view is that if Kerensky comes to the United States he will proceed to San Francisco and there take ship for Siberia, where the conservative elements of Russia are reported to be gathering, the conservatives in Russia today including Social Revolutionists as well as Constitutional Democrats.

At the State Department also it was declared that nothing was known concerning the movements of the former Russian Revolutionary leader, but it was added that he might be traveling under an assumed name. In diplomatic circles it was asserted that the allied and American Governments, as well as Russian diplomats, would naturally desire to conceal the activities and movements of Kerensky, if his advice is to be sought in bringing about a new state of affairs in Russia.

The attitude of General Semenoff, the Cossack leader in Siberia hostile to the Bolsheviki, toward Kerensky and any plan favored by the Allies and the United States looking toward the rehabilitation of Russia, is believed to be wholly sympathetic. It has been repeatedly stated in Russian circles here that Semenoff himself is not moved by political ambitions, and that his only desire is to see Russia liberated from the Austro-German invasion and so circumstanced that she might again become a valuable aid to the Allies in the war against the Central Empires.

A dispatch from Constantinople reaching here through German channels from Amsterdam states that the aim of the peace negotiations at Batum between Turkey and the Caucasus is the subjection of Trans-Caucasia to the quadruple entente, as was the case with Ukrainia, Poland, and Rumania. The dispatch adds:

"It is necessary that Trans-Caucasia should become entirely independent of Russia and that she should form close relations with Turkey."

A dispatch from Paris states that the Jewish National Council has issued a protest against the atrocities committed upon the Jewish population in the occupied districts of Russia. It is charged that pogroms have been organized by the German authorities, who have aroused the peasants against the Jews.

SIBERIA LOOKS TO ENGLAND.

Expects Her to Take Initiative in Intervention, Okulich Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—The Chronicle publishes an article by Joseph Okulich, urging the need of Allied intervention in Siberia. Okulich is a native of Siberia and one of its most prominent public men. He was a member of the Council of the Ministry of Commerce and Industries in the former Czar's and Kerensky's Governments. He is President of the Association of Shipowners on the Yenisei River, President of the Central Siberian Board of Trade, Manager of the Union of Siberian Creamery Associations, and is also a Cossack of the Yenisei Regiment. He writes:

"Having just returned from Siberia, I herewith declare that the power of the Bolshevist Soviets in Siberia is not based on any class in that country. They were elected last year by certain garrisons with Bolshevist leanings, and therefore they cannot base their power on the soldiers, as these were demobilized, nor on the industrial proletariat, as such does not exist in Siberia, the obvious reason for that being the absence of industrial centres. Also, they cannot base their power on the Siberian peasantry, which has never known feudal oppression or any agrarian difficulties.

"Terrorized townspeople dare not express their protests in active form; the peasants, on the other hand, living in villages, do not understand what is going on, and do not care to understand it either. Only in isolated cases, when their interests are imperiled, do the Cossacks, who are partly disarmed, offer feeble tentative resistance to the Red Guards, who are armed to the teeth with all modern weapons, which they removed from the German front.

"Every day sees Siberia approaching nearer and nearer to the point of complete exhaustion of her economic life. This is all to the interest of German imperialists, who are dreaming of capturing the entire Russian market and valuable raw materials for feeding their factories. Siberia does not want to become a German colony, and, what is more, she must not become a German colony.

"At present Siberia has vast stocks of butter, about 75,000 tons; she has also about fifty tons of gold, also copper and other minerals. She can live quite an independent life, and her 13,000,000 inhabitants are sufficiently active and energetic not to become slaves to the enemy.

"From this it will be seen that the political situation is such that outside help is imperative. Such help she expects in joint intervention by the Allies' countries. Siberia expects help from the Allies in the form of an international expedition which will be enthusiastically received from Vladivostok up to the Ural Mountains, which will clear the Siberian railway line and various towns from Bolshevist bands, and will enable the population within three or six months to organize elections for a Siberian Constituent Assembly, which in its turn will elect a responsible Government for Siberia.

"It is not yet too late to reorganize the financial apparatus of the country, and it is quite possible with the help of the Cossacks to organize military guards for the defense of the frontiers of Siberia. On the European frontier, as well as on others, not only will a regenerated Siberia be very useful for the remaining parts of Russia, but it will save it from becoming a sphere of influence for German capital.

"I venture to emphasize that delay will be fatal. Siberia expects the initiative from England, if for no other reason than the latter's own interests."

FRENCH INVESTORS FEAR RUSSIAN LOSS

Doubt That Paris Government Will Continue to Assume the Defaulted Payments.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 22.—French investors in Russian Government bonds and other Muscovite securities are showing great anxiety whether they will receive the interest due them in July next. The seriousness of their position may be realized from the fact that France is a creditor of Russia to the tune of something like $4,000,000,000. French investors hold today $2,800,000,000 of Russian Government bonds, while they have at least another $200,000,000 invested in Russian industrials.

France is also a creditor in the sum of between $700,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 for advances made in materials supplied to Russia since the war began.

Since the Bolshevist régime was established seven months ago the Russians have ceased to honor their obligations. Most of the money sunk in Russian subscriptions has been drawn from people of very limited means.

For years investment in Russian securities was regarded here as a patriotic duty, second only to the purchase of French rentes, for the Russian alliance was the only real wall against the German wolf. Consequently, savings, often of the poorest, were eagerly thrown into the Russian treasury. The stoppage of Russian interest payments would mean the reduction to poverty of thousands of small people, who are depending on the Russian coupons being honored.

Up to April last, the French Government itself assumed the payment of the Russian interest; but since then banks here intimated that no further payments of this kind will be made. The vast bulk of this money has been invested admittedly as a part of the French national defense, although indirectly. The last Russian loan in January, 1914, for instance, was expressly sanctioned by the French Finance Minister, on the ground that the money would be used for the construction of new strategic railroads. Pressure is now being brought on the French Government to continue payment of interest on Russian bonds, but the treasury here is faced with the difficulty that this will mean the provision of an additional $200,000,000 a year, which is not easy to find under present conditions.

Notice has been given of an intention to raise the subject in the Senate, but so far Finance Minister Klotz has refused to fix a date for debate, on the ground that the matter must first be thrashed out by the Council of Ministers.

FINLAND WARNED BY GREAT BRITAIN

Move Against Mourmansk Railway Will Be Regarded by Allies as Hostile Act.

LONDON, May 22.—Any measures directed by Finland against the Mourmansk Railway will be regarded by Great Britain, France, and the United States as a breach of neutrality, the Dagblad of Stockholm says.

A Stockholm dispatch to The Morning Post quotes this newspaper as saying that the Finnish Government has been so informed by Great Britain.

FINNS SPLIT ON MONARCHY.

Strong Opposition to Plan and Threat of New Civil War Made.

STOCKHOLM, May 22.—The propaganda in favor of a monarchical government for Finland is meeting with considerable opposition. Editors of Finnish newspapers, meeting at Helsingfors yesterday, voted by a great majority for a republic.

At the meeting of the Finnish Diet, at which Judge Svinhufvud was nominated temporary Dictator, warnings were freely given against an attempt to establish a monarchy. Several members of the peasant party threatened a new civil war if such a step were taken. They declared that the army strongly favored a republic.

WOMEN SOLDIERS SORRY.

Colonel Here on Way to Apologize to Allies for Russia's Failure.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Colonel Maria Leonteva Botchkarova, organizer of women soldiers in Russia, and head of the "Battalion of Death," who is in Chicago today on her way to England, said she expected to stop in Washington and seek an interview with President Wilson. The Colonel did not disclose the nature of her mission to England, except to say it was to apologize to the Entente Allies for her country's failure to "stick to the finish."

She declared the real reason for organization of the women into soldiery was that "it might prove an inspiration to Russian manhood."

RUSSIANS SEEK LEAVE TO GO HOME TO FIGHT

Leaders of New Movement Will Ask Wilson's Approval of War on Bolsheviki and Germans.

A committee representing the recently organized Federation of Russian Associations of America left last night for Washington to ask permission of President Wilson to send into Russia the regiments of Russian volunteers which are now being organized in this country. The federation represents Russians of all phases of political opinion except the Bolsheviki, but the prevailing sentiment appears to be that of the Social Revolutionaries, the party of Kerensky and Savinkoff. Its leaders believe that the entrance into Russia of a body of Russians from America, fighting for the revolution but against the Germans and against the Bolsheviki, would rally around their standard the great masses of the Russian people.

The committee which went to Washington, and which expects to confer with high officials of the Government, consisted of Elias Rosenthal, P. Whitney-Wishnemecky, Colonel A. A. Koch, formerly a member of the Russian military mission, and Apollinarius Dimitrovitch Semenovsky, who was Minister of Ways and Communications under Kerensky.

"We are thoroughly convinced," said a leader in the movement last night, "that the entry into Russia of Russians from America, determined to fight for the national independence and for the maintenance of the principles on which the revolution was founded would be able to effect the salvation of the country. The Bolsheviki have now lost most of the power which they at one time possessed. In the Ukraine peasants who were supposed to be friendly to the Germans are now burning their grain to keep it from falling into German hands. The peace of Brest-Litovsk is regarded with the same sentiments in Russia as here. We believe that the opportune moment has come to get together those who have been kept in terror for the last few months by the comparatively small force of Bolsheviki and to unite them to save Russia.

"The Russians have been drugged for the time, but they will soon awaken. They know that America is their friend, and the arrival of their own people from America to help them should bring them together. I am convinced that once the movement has started it will grow like a rolling snowball."

TO HOUSE KERENSKY IN RIVERSIDE DRIVE

EXPECTED TO ARRIVE SOON

Quiet, Accessible, and Semi-Secluded Place Chosen—Ample Room for Many Callers and Guests.

The home of Alexander F. Kerensky in this city, it was announced last night, will be at 99 Riverside Drive. Rich Russians had taken the house, would furnish it as a club, and the young Russian leader would live there. The building is of brown stone of five stories and basement. It has fifteen spacious rooms, wide winding staircases, and windows in every room opening on the Drive or on Eighty-second Street.

Some doubt as to the length of Mr. Kerensky's stay in this country, it was declared, resulted in an arrangement by which the house has been taken for a specified period, with the privilege of purchase. The entrance is on the side street, but the building bulks large on the Drive, and from the upper windows the Hudson and the Palisades can be seen for many miles. All things considered the house compares favorably with any structure on the shore front.

Knowing Mr. Kerensky's weak physical condition, his nervous temperament, and his need of ample rest, a quiet and retired home was deemed absolutely necessary, and it was this thought that induced the Russians seeking a home for him to choose this locality.

It is away from the lights and bustle of more central locations, and one of the advantages of the neighborhood is that persons may be entertained there without notice. That there will be many guests is certain, and that while the presence of some of them may be freely advertised it is likely that some of those who call will desire to feel that their arrival and departure will not attract public attention.

On every floor there are large rooms which may be used with comfort for the assembly of a score or more of men, and each of them may be shut off from all the others. There are many bedrooms.

When a reporter called at the house last night things were in much confusion, for Mrs. August E. Knopf, the present occupant and owner, was in the midst of packing. Efforts were making to vacate the house this week so that preparations could be made for its refurnishing so that it would be ready for Mr. Kerensky and his friends as soon as possible.

Mrs. Knopf did not know the names of the Russians who had taken over the property. She said they were members of the Russian Club. She had understood that some of them were to live in the house at least part of the time, but that Mr. Kerensky, she had been told, was to make it his home as long as he remained in this country.

No one could be found last night who would give any details as to the time of Mr. Kerensky's arrival in this country or the length of his stay.

REDS RUN TO CUBIST ART,

Marinsky Palace, Petrograd, Daubed for May Day Celebration.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Express, describing the Bolshevist May Day celebrations, says a grotesque feature was the daubing of the Marinsky Palace—the House of Lords of the Romanoff days—the Winter Palace, and the Government offices in peculiar colors of a cubist scheme devised by Signor Marinetti.

A more ambitious note was struck by the allegorical presentation of the progress of the proletariat, after the style of a Bayeux tapestry. This embraced a weird picture of the Kaiser as a skeleton of death crowned with a German helmet and with an Iron Cross pinned to his ribs, and a scythe grasped in his bony fingers shown in the act of cutting down the red flowers of revolutionary Russia.

SWISS SIGN BERLIN TREATY.

Will Get Coal from Germany and Send Cattle There.

BERNE, May 22.—After amicable explanation to France the Swiss Government resolved today to sign the new treaty with Germany by which Switzerland would be provided with German coal until Jan. 31, 1919. This convention will be quite independent from arrangements with France relative to the delivery of French coal to Switzerland.

The terms of the new treaty between Switzerland and Germany announced last week were that Germany would export each month to Switzerland 200,000 tons of coal and 19,000 tons of iron and steel. Among the exports from Switzerland were to be 15,000 to 17,000 cattle a month.

LENINE SEES RUSSIA ON VERGE OF WAR

Tells Bolshevist Executive Council to Prepare to Defend "the World's Socialism."

BY ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, (of Unknown Date.)—The report which Lenine made last night to the Central Executive Committee is a clear statement of the Soviet policy. For Russia the question of war or peace hangs on a hair, both in the west and in the east.

"The situation," said Lenine, "is that stormy waves of imperialistic reaction, which seem ready any moment to drown the little island of the Socialist Soviet Republic, are broken one against another."

He referred particularly to the struggle between England and Germany, and then to the economic rivalry between America and Japan. The attack on the Soviet, which began by the Japanese landing at Vladivostok, had, he said, been stopped, lest it should turn the hidden conflict between Japan and America into open war; but "tomorrow the American bourgeoisie may come to terms with the Japanese bourgeoisie and the English bourgeoisie with the German, for all have a common interest in dividing up the globe."

"Only recently," he said, "they denounced as traitors those who opened the eyes of the popular masses to the existence of the imperialistic war, and now they are themselves ready, in the course of a few weeks, to change their political faith, and from an alliance with English bandits to turn over to an alliance with German bandits against the power of the Soviet."

He alluded in detail to various danger points from which war might be brought upon Russia before she was ready. Lenine next spoke of the Ukraine and the possibility that Skoropadsky might have other frontiers in view than those which satisfied the Rada. Here, too, is an imminent possibility of war, and the same is true of the Caucasus Government, which has declared its independence but not defined its frontiers, thereby opening the way for the Turks and Germans.

"Of course," he said, "the Caucasian Rada is independent of the Soviet Republic, but it is not so independent of the German imperialism."

Finally, at any moment, the extreme military party in either of the imperialistic groups might have its way and find an excuse for an attack on the Soviets.

"We shall do all the little we can, all that diplomacy can do, to put off that moment."

With every week of breathing time the Soviet power was gaining strength for the final struggle.

"We are the party of defense," said Lenine, [this name was given to the party that considered war necessary,] "and since Oct. 25 we have won the right to defend our fatherland. We shall defend, not the secret agreements which we have published to the world; we shall defend not a 'Great Power,' for there is nothing of Russia left but Great Russia, and not national interests, because for us the interests of the world's socialism stand higher than national interests. We stand for the defense of the socialistic fatherland."

For that, he concluded, it was necessary to have an army, which would be forthcoming when the peasant soldiers who returned home realized they now had something to defend.

The debate that followed illustrated the impractical and purely political nature of the opposition, which, while urging immediate war, implicitly recognized that immediate war could only end in immediate failure.

Joffe's telegrams from Berlin show the Germans are ready to go a considerable way in concession; but even at this late hour, I believe, if we show an understanding of the Soviet point of view and do not try to bring the Russians vainly and prematurely into war, we can do much to prevent, or at least postpone, that German domination which will be the immediate result of any kind of intervention not regularized by a recognition of the Soviet Government.

Our policy saved a life income for the widow

SOME years ago this Company was appointed trustee of an estate, more than half of which consisted of a cash balance deposited with a mercantile corporation at an attractive rate of interest. The corporation bore an excellent reputation and the heirs were strongly in favor of leaving the money there.

IT IS our fixed policy, however, to keep funds of clients with approved banking depositaries only, so this money was withdrawn from the mercantile corporation. Two weeks later it failed.

THE prompt carrying out of our established safe policy prevented a disastrous loss to the estate. The money was promptly invested in approved securities and the income assures the widow a comfortable maintenance during her entire life.

UPHELD TRADITIONS OF FOREIGN LEGION

HEROES TO THE LAST MAN

Battalion Had to be Restrained from Sacrificing Itself to Save Its Captain's Body.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 21.—There could be no better object lesson of the value of military discipline, training, and tradition than that furnished by the visit which I made today to the Colonel of the Foreign Legion.

I was received beforehand by the General commanding the famous Moroccan division in which the legion has been incorporated. He is well worthy to lead the bravest of the brave, for his War Cross ribbon bears more palms—six or seven, at least, each indicating a separate citation in army orders—than that of any French soldier I have seen except the crack airmen.

With simple brevity he declared his pride in having command of such troops as those who once again accomplished the impossible in the desperate fighting that resulted in the recapture of the Villers-Bretonneux plateau on April 26 and 27. He also expressed warm praise of one of the American divisions that had been his neighbor earlier in the year.

Like him, the Colonel of the Legion has fully earned the right to lead the first regiment in the French Army to wear the blood red Legion of Honor shoulder cord. For twenty years he has been an officer in the Foreign Legion, and has fought all over the world, but his figure is slight and agile as a boy's, and there is no sign of gray in his hair on his pointed Henri Quatre beard, and his eyes. Much has been said about the eyes of the great leaders in this war, but never have I seen anything to be compared with the gaze of this professional soldier, whose blue steel flash seems to strike one with the force and directness of a physical impact.

An Answer to Wilson's Appeal.

Before describing the action in which his regiment took part the Colonel remarked that the Legion was a living response to President Wilson's appeal to the whole world to unite in the struggle for freedom and democracy. Representatives of no less than fifty-six different races are in its ranks, with nothing in common between them save the fact that they have all come forward voluntarily in a strange land to fight for France and her ideals of civilization.

"You may wonder," the Colonel said, "how material so mixed can, despite difficulties of language, be welded into a force whose cohesion is so perfect that each individual is marked with the same imprint, and that the word 'legionary' stands throughout the French Army for the type of first-class fighting man.

"The answer is simple discipline, the practice of war and the tradition of the regiment. Ever since its foundation the Legion has been making war equally amid conditions of exceptional difficulty. The result has been that, no matter how great our losses, there always remained a framework of trained officers and soldiers to transmit the regimental spirit to the strangers that came to fill up the ranks. As France, England, and your own country have discovered, only the strictest discipline can prepare men to withstand without faltering the terrific shock of modern war.

"The officers and noncoms of the Legion had learned their lesson in the hardest of schools. In the flame of the Artois battle of May 9, 1915—our first engagement in this war, in which success and losses were equally great—the regiment, newcomers and old hands alike, was fused into a unity so solid that, although hardly a man of the original contingent remains, the Legion has always made good its boast of accomplishing what no other troops would be called on to attempt.

Glorious at Villers-Bretonneux.

"Take the case last month at Villers-Bretonneux. A flat plateau, devoid of all shelter or hollows, formed an ideal glacis for defense by the mitrailleuses with which the enemy was so liberally provided. It was the Legion's duty to advance across that open space without the usual artillery preparation or barrage fire moving forward in front of it.

"At one moment the battalions which formed the leading wave were swept by a hail of bullets from the front and both flanks at once; yet they pushed on 700 precious yards, and stopped only through sheer lack of men to continue. With the remainder they repelled the counterattack which the Germans flung at them immediately in an attempt to retain the position whose value they fully realized for subsequent operations. And the legionaries did hold until reinforcements reached them and worked throughout the night to consolidate the ground their sacrifice had bought.

"Then it was our turn to make the enemy face mitrailleuse fire on the open glacis, and he paid tenfold for the toll he had taken on the previous day. Again and again the German waves advanced to the attack. Each time the only result was added slaughter, until the ground was covered with his dead.

"One detail to show you what the spirit of the Legion means: Among the fallen officers of the battalion was a Captain who had spent all his life in the Legion, and typified exactly its discipline and traditions. Stern beyond severity, but absolutely just, he never spared his men if necessity demanded sacrifice. True to the last, he fell right in the very forefront of his company, more than a hundred yards beyond the point where our defense line was consolidated.

"All through the night the survivors of his battalion spent their last energies and gave their lives to recover his body. By morning the rest of the officers had been brought back, but he and one other still lay in the deadly expanse, where nothing might pass and live. Before noon the remnant of the battalion was withdrawn. That night some of them went forward again to seek their Captain.

"Again none of them returned. And yet it required my strictest orders to prevent the last survivors from continuing the impossible attempt. They refused to be satisfied until the acceptance by the enemy of his defeat enabled us finally to recover the body of our comrade. Can you ask a better illustration of what is meant by the traditions of the Foreign Legion?"

PARIS REPULSES RAID; ONE AIRPLANE DOWNED

Germans Vainly Seek a Gap in the Wall of Fire—Three Killed in City's Outskirts.

PARIS, May 22.—German aviators made an ineffectual attempt last night to raid Paris. Three persons were killed and several wounded in the outskirts of the city, but none of the raiders reached Paris itself. A German airplane was hit by an anti-aircraft gun and fell in flames north of the city.

The enemy dropped bombs in various suburban localities. Some material damage is reported. The signal that all was clear was sounded at 1 o'clock this morning.

The raid demonstrated the high state of efficiency to which the aerial defenses of the city have been brought.

LONDON RAID COST 44 LIVES

Total Small Compared with the Number of Dwellings Wrecked.

LONDON, May 22.—The casualties in Sunday night's air raid are given in a supplemental statement issued today as 44 killed and 179 injured.

The principal feature of the raid was the remarkable number of escapes from injury as compared with the damage to dwelling houses. Many of the casualties were among persons who were on the streets or in doorways, which emphasizes the warnings of the police that shelter should be sought.

BRITISH ADVANCE ON TIGRIS.

Cavalry Occupies Fatha Village with Little Opposition.

LONDON, May 22.—Turkish troops in Mesopotamia north of Bagdad display little activity, while British cavalry has advanced north of Tekrit on the Tigris to Fatha. An official statement on operations in Mesopotamia reads:

The Turks have shown no activity snice they were driven across the lesser Zab on May 11. Removal of large quantities of military stores captured in Kirkuk proceeds without interruption.

On the Tigris our mounted troops have advanced as far as Fatha. The Turks holding the village offered little resistance and retreated hastily further up the river.

TO TRY VOLUNTARY PLAN IN IRELAND

WANTS PARADE BY OUR MEN

That Would Convince Ireland That It Was for the World's Cause They Would Fight.

By MAJOR GEN. SIR FREDERICK MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—There are few matters which more immediately concern the present military situation than the passage in Lord French's proclamation to Ireland which runs:

"That as a means to this end we should cause still further steps to be taken to facilitate and encourage voluntary enlistment in Ireland in his Majesty's forces in the hope that without resort to compulsion the contribution of Ireland to those forces may be brought up to its proper strength, and made to correspond to the contributions of the other parts of the empire."

Doubts have been expressed as to whether this means the dropping of conscription in Ireland or not. I do not pretend to know, but it quite obviously means that voluntary enlistment is to be tried at once.

Now the plain facts of the situation are, we want men, and we want them at once, to meet the great German menace on the western front. The pronouncements of the Government on this matter have left us in no doubt. Speaking on this question of the need for men on April 9, the Prime Minister said:

"We have to choose between either submitting to defeat or taking the necessary measures to avert it. We will never submit to accept defeat."

The matter could not be put more clearly.

We are still at the beginning of the campaign of 1918, which may well run on into November and bring with it a fresh crisis at least as dangerous as that through which we have just passed. The men whom we obtain now can be made ready for the field in time to take part in this year's campaign. The men whom we obtain in two or three months' time will not arrive in France until Winter has put a close to operations on a large scale.

It is already two months since the German blow fell upon us, and the machinery for conscription in Ireland has not yet been set up. It is quite clear that the English tribunal system will be useless in a country in the greater part of which the parliamentary representatives, local authorities, and priesthood have declared their opposition to conscription. Some new methods must be devised, and that means delay. There are certain to be evasions, and it will probably be necessary to employ force.

Apart from the general difficulty of enforcing conscription upon any people against their will, the Irishman, in particular, is constitutionally opposed to compulsion of any kind. Tell him that he has got to do a thing and he will say that he wont.

Ask him to do it and if appealed to in the right way he will generally respond with warm-hearted enthusiasm.

The announcement of the voluntary recruiting campaign has already met with a response. Captain Stephen Gwynn, M. P., has written to the Irish papers recommending the Irish people to accept the offer and saying that in his opinion Ireland can well spare as many men as will refill the depleted ranks of the three Irish divisions. If Ireland will give us now the men to bring these divisions up to strength and keep them up to strength, they will be worth double the number dragged in to serve after the present danger is past.

We are told that voluntary recruiting in Ireland is dead. That may be true or it may not, but placed as we are at present it is at least worth while to be sure that it is so.

In this matter of recruiting we have been dogged by fate which seems to mar all our dealings with Ireland, and we have succeeded clumsily though unwittingly in ruffling Irish sentiment throughout the war.

Until the Government makes its promised disclosures we do not know what may be the ramifications of the recently discovered plot, but no one believes that Ireland as a whole is pro-German. The great part of the people may be anti-English, but they are certainly not anti-American or anti-French. There are numbers of Irish soldiers who have won distinction in this war and who, knowing Ireland and the Irishmen, believe that a skillful appeal to Irish sentiment would bring forward men in numbers who would uphold the best traditions of Irish gallantry in the field.

Such an appeal, led by the present Viceroy, who is himself the Colonel of two Irish regiments, and conducted by Irish officers, has at least the air of being something better than a counsel of despair. If it is made clear to Irishmen that they are being asked to come forward, not to pick chestnuts out of the fire for England, but to join the ranks of the Entente in the cause of liberty—if a plain, ocular demonstration of this fact could be given to Irishmen by allowing American troops to march through the streets of Dublin, Belfast, and Cork in the same way as they marched through the streets of London, and if in the matter of uniform and of regimental distinctions, Irish history and Irish military achievements are remembered and recorded in outward and visible signs, there is hope that our own past errors may be forgiven and forgotten, and that Ireland may send her sons on a scale "to correspond to the contributions of the other parts of the empire."

In the days of our last military effort the gallantry of "my brave Irish" in Natal added a new regiment to the King's bodyguard, and the Irish Guards have made the saffron kilt and Irish pipes familiar to Londoners. Distinctions such as these may seem trivial matters in comparison with the great problems bound up with our relations with Ireland, but they mean sympathy and understanding. With both of these we may get Ireland's present help in time of trouble, while compulsion, like so much else in this war, would be too late.

PERSHING REPORTS RAID.

Tells of Capture and of a Dead German Brought Back.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—General Pershing today reported to the War Department details of a patrol raid made Monday night by American troops, which resulted in the capture of two German prisoners. There were no casualties on the American side. Artillery activity on both sides is noted in the official communiqué today.

Section "A" of the communiqué, dated May 21, was the same as received in news dispatches from France last night, mentioning reconnoissance combats in Lorraine and artillery activity there and in the Woevre. Section "B" follows:

"Last night in Lorraine patrolling was very active, especially from our side. One patrol consisting of an officer and twenty men, exploring a hostile position, gained contact and opened fire on a German patrol of approximately the same size. German patrol took cover and returned fire. Our patrol rushed the position, put the enemy to flight, and captured two prisoners. One prisoner died of wounds after reaching our lines. Our patrol suffered no casualties. Later in the night a small hostile patrol attempted to rush one of our outposts but was driven off by rifle fire. One German was killed and his body brought into our lines."

OUR GUNS LAUNCH TERRIFIC GAS FIRE

HOSTILE PATROLS BEATEN

Americans Take Two Prisoners in One Clash—Raid High-Tension Cable.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 21, (Associated Press.)—The American artillery northwest of Toul launched a sudden and terrific local gas attack upon the German positions and cantonments within the Gerechamp Wood early today. Severe punishment was inflicted upon the enemy. How great is not yet known.

The deluge of American shells fell in three waves, and within half an hour the woods, in which it is known many Germans were sleeping, had been drenched with a large quantity of poisonous gas.

In lively patrol actions Monday night and this morning east of Lunéville, German parties were twice defeated by the Americans, who captured two prisoners.

An officer and twenty men exploring the area northwest of Ancervillers, east of Lunéville, sighted four enemy patrols and established contact with one of them. The enemy party, numbering sixteen, took up a position in an unused trench, from which they were driven by the rifle and grenade firing of the Americans. The Germans were then rushed by the Americans, who took two prisoners, one so badly injured that he died later. There were no casualties on the American side.

Enemy Patrol Driven Off.

Four hours later an enemy patrol made a bold attempt to rush one of our outposts, but was driven off. One German was killed and his body was brought back to the American lines for identification purposes.

Northwest of Toul an American patrol traversed the Apremont-Varneville Road and found a high tension cable used for charging the enemy wire. They cut the cable and brought back a large section of it.

Another patrol came on a German party southwest of Apremont and sharp fighting resulted. The Americans used their pistols, rifles, and hand grenades effectively, and the Germans were forced to retire.

A Corporal named Klick, from a New England State, carried out a "personal patrol" late yesterday afternoon. He crawled to the enemy wire to investigate what he thought was a periscope and saw a German step up to the firing trench. Bullets were exchanged, but the American returned safely across No Man's Land.

Our Front Ranks Third.

Washington's announcement that the combined fronts held by the American expeditionary forces in France cover a greater distance than that held by Belgium and take third rank has inspired the men in the American ranks as probably nothing else could.

The announcement was published in the newspapers reaching the various zones in which there are Americans today and the result is that every one of the "doughboys" is walking just a little straighter and there is just a little more snap in his salute.

Staff officers and certain other officers have known the fact for some time, but the average American soldier, billeted in some out-of-the-way little French village or living where the shells fly, does not get a chance to know what is going on outside his own little sphere.

In a vague way the men in the line have known that other Americans have been scattered along the battlefront somewhere between Switzerland and the sea. But none even thought the forces of which he was a member were holding a section of the line second only to that held by the French and British troops.

The announcement was the sole topic of conversation tonight in the dugouts, trenches, and billets. The men now are looking forward the time when there may be an announcement that the Americans are occupying the second place.

BOHEMIA DIVIDED TO CRUSH CZECHS

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

TEUTON GAIN IN REICHSRAT

Soldier Tries to Placate the Czechs by Telling of Emperor's Peace Efforts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—An official French dispatch received today announces that a decree has been issued in Vienna dividing Bohemia into twelve district governments, with administrative and electoral advantages to the Germans which will reduce the Czech power in the Reichsrat at Vienna as well as in Bohemia itself. Martial law, the dispatch also announces, has been proclaimed in some parts of Bohemia.

"The law bulletin of the Austrian Empire," said the dispatch, "publishes a decree acording to which the district governments which were so long demanded by the Germans are established in Bohemia. The twelve district captains who are nominated will represent the Statthalter of Prague in each district and will have the same powers.

"The boundaries of the districts are fixed, so far as possible, according to the national grouping. In the words of the decree, 'the aim is to take the first steps toward the re-establishment of order in Bohemia.' This decree foreruns undoubtedly a policy of repression, the first act of which tends to dismember Bohemia by granting to the German elements the guarantees or, better, the privileges which they demand.

Old Nationalist Lines Broken.

"Up to the present, Bohemia comprised thirteen districts, only two of which had a majority of German population, according to statistics from Vienna. In four of the districts there are hardly any Germans. The new plan aims at creating in each of the twelve new districts a German minority and to grant to this minority, however small it may be, considerable advantages in the administrative and electoral domains.

"This method is meant to bring about as a first result a considerable increase in the number of German deputies in the Diet to the prejudice of the Czechs, who until now have held the majority of the seats. It is clear that this device of the Pan Germans is bound to arouse the most violent opposition on the part of the Czechs.

"A dispatch printed in all the Agram papers calls attention to the fact that martial law has been proclaimed in several districts of Bohemia because in certain regions serious riots have occurred. More than 150 persons have been put in prison. The estate of Prince Furstenberg was ransacked. Riots occurred at Marsch, Ostrau, Pilsen, and Nachod.

"The Czech press expresses itself very violently. The Vetcher writes:

"'The Government is trying in vain to present its reform under bright colors, but it is evident at first sight, in fact, that nothing but the dismembering of Bohemia is under way. The ministerial decree is preparing the parceling out of our fatherland and the foundation of a German province made of our own flesh.'

Predicts Strong Resistance.

"The Narodni Listi, which was suppressed by the censorship as guilty of 'criminal dealings,' has written:

"'It is in vain that threats are hurled at us to divert us from the line of conduct which we have decided to follow according to our proclamation. It is in vain that the sessions of Parliament are adjourned. Our indignation will not be less in June (the Austrian chamber is to resume its sittings on June 19) and our opponents will have the opportunity of realizing it. The chart which, according to von Seidler, is to be granted to us, will not change our resolution: We shall fight on without any consideration, without compromise, for the defense of the Czech State.'

"This evidently shows the attitude of all the nationalities crushed by the Germans and the Magyars in the dual monarchy. The movement was not entirely unexpected, but it is possible that the fact of threatening them with a pitiless repression has advanced it and made it more formidable.

"Emperor Charles is away from Vienna, and on his return he will find political conditions which the food situation will make even more distressing. Once more the frightfulness of German methods, so dear to the Germans, will bear its fruit by arousing rebellion of the people oppressed."

Vienna Feared Prague Outbreak.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—An official Austrian note cabled to Washington from Berne throws light on the motives which caused the Austrian Government to declare martial law in Bohemia. The note says:

"Certain events, which were a danger to the safety of the State and presented even a character of high treason, took place during the first days of the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of the National Bohemian Theatre, and led the authorities to take repressive measures."

Swiss commentators explain that this alludes to a note from the police posted in Prague, which declared that mob gatherings and processions would be dispersed by force if necessary. Jugo-Slav guests, who had come to Prague to participate in the celebration, were obliged to leave the city, and the newspaper Narodni Listi was suspended because the Austrian authorities declared: "The manner in which this paper is worded tends to arouse sympathy in favor of the Entente States."

Accounts of the great gathering at Prague, which caused the Austrian Government to declare martial law, say that the city was adorned with the Czech colors and the Slav tricolor flag. The Czech press expressed regret at the absence of Russians and great satisfaction at the presence of Poles. It was reported that the Ruthenians of Oriental Galicia were prevented by the authorities from attending.

The festival was organized by the recently formed Independence Party of Dr. Kramarcz, and the ceremonies consisted generally of a glorification of the union of the Slavic peoples.

AIMS AT REICHSRATH GAIN.

Scheme for a German Bohemia Also Seen in Vienna Move.

The German plans of reorganization in Bohemia apparently have two purposes. One is to obtain an electoral reorganization so that some of the 109 seats in the Reichsrath held by Czech Deputies can be swung over to the Germans and enable them to maintain their hold on the Parliament.

The lower house of the Reichsrath consists of 516 members, of whom in the last session 233 were Germans. The dominant nationality has in years past managed to keep its control of the Parliament through alliance with the Poles, who hold 80 or 90 seats, but at the session which opened on May 31, 1917, and ended early in the present month—the first gathering of the Reichsrath since the war began—the Poles on several occasions broke away from the Germans and threw Parliament into chaos.

Already the Jugoslavs and Czechs were working together, and generally could count on the support of the Ruthenians (Ukrainians) and the Italians. This tendency was much accentuated during the last few months, when Polish leaders came much more closely toward an alliance with the Czechoslovaks and Jugoslavs. This was cemented by meetings of the intellectuals of the three nations, held at Prague, and was greatly promoted by the Conference of Oppressed Austrian Nationalities held at Rome in April. At the last named conference the questions at issue between the Italians and Jugoslavs were settled, and the Poles joined the other delegates in the demand for a complete overthrow of the present Austrian Empire, declaring that the future of Poland lay in firm alliance with reconstituted nations of the Czechoslovaks, the Jugoslavs, and the Rumanians.

The movement thus brought about would leave the German minority isolated in the next Parliament, if this should ever be called together—a matter as to which considerable doubt has been expressed. It is evidently in the hope of still further strengthening the already existing discrimination in favor of the German minorities in Bohemia, Silesia, and Morava—the Germans in these provinces forming about one-fourth of the population, but having a much larger percentage of seats in the Reichsrath—that there is talk of electoral redistribution.

The proposal to cut up Bohemia into twelve districts is believed by Czechoslovak leaders in this city to have a double edge. It is intended partly, they think, to try to weaken the Bohemian national movement by decentralizing the forces of the nation and partly to prepare for the possible establishment of a province of "German Bohemia," such as has been talked of in case the national movement is so strong as to force the Austrian Government to try to compromise on some sort of federalization.

The Czechoslovak nation, which has declared its demands for unity and complete independence, includes the Slovaks in the northern part of the Kingdom of Hungary and the Czechs, now divided among Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, three of the seventeen crown lands of Austria.

There has been much reference in German-Austrian papers recently to the possible establishment of a German Bohemia, to include the districts with the largest German population. Any rearrangement on this basis would be beset with obstacles, for the Czechoslovaks refuse to consent to any partition and the Germans demand not only the border districts for their German Bohemia, but the City of Prague itself.

Local officials of the Czechoslovak National Council said last night that it was understood that each of the twelve districts into which it was proposed to divide Bohemia would have its own Diet, nominally in charge of certain phases of local self-government, and that while it was not exactly equivalent to the establishment of twelve new crown lands, a precedent which would probably prove inconvenient, there was no question that the object was to decentralize Bohemia and weaken the power of the national movement.

ITALIAN TROOPS LIKE GIFTS FROM AMERICA

Queen Elena, at Exhibition in Rome, Much Interested in Transatlantic Packages.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 22.—Queen Elena, who has been indefatigable in her desire to do her utmost to demonstrate her solicitude to the families who have so nobly given their sons in the fight for Italy with affection and thought for their country, has organized in the old historic Palazzo Chigi, a most interesting exhibition, showing to the minutest detail what has been accomplished by the nation for assisting the army. She inaugurated it personally today.

Different sections show the work accomplished by blind and mutilated Italian heroes, the manufacture of limbs, also a surgical hospital for jaw cases, &c. It would be too long to enumerate all the sections exhibited.

One department, which greatly interested the public, was the Bureau of Gifts for Soldiers.

Here was shown the great development undergone by this organization, which lately increased eightfold its distribution. Queen Elena expressed much interest on seeing exhibited in this department two bags bearing in one corner "The Star-Spangled Banner," the only foreign emblem in the whole exhibition. These were packages for Italian soldiers received through the American clearing house, also trench comfort packets from the committee in New York. The latter has already sent many thousands to be distributed at the Italian front.

A high personage accompanying the Queen said: "We have witnessed the great moral effect these gifts produce on our soldiers, who particularly like American presents, these being more original and coming from a land many of them have known. I am sure if Americans realized the great effect produced by these gifts they would double their efforts, although already so generous."

In fact, in many quarters here, it is suggested that part of the funds collected on Italy Day in America might be destined for this purpose.

said, "Don't mind us; we have no chance."

This last signal was the agreed emergency sign which was to be sent up in case there was no opportunity to give help. It is believed that they blew up their craft and took to the water in accordance with the program, as an explosive time bomb had been set to go off even if the craft was under water.

In the meantime, the sky was vivid with searchlights and the land batteries were pouring a terrific fire on the escort. They clung to their work for a time and then left, with forty searchlights and countless batteries playing upon them.

As daylight broke, a fleet of enemy airplanes swooped down, but was beaten off by a smaller fleet of Italian planes, three enemy machines falling into the water during the aerial battle.

No word has since been heard of Commander Pellegrini and his party. Their signal was definite that a ship had been hit and aerial photographs are expected soon to confirm their message.

There is every reason to believe that the four men are prisoners. In any event, their associates and the country greet the fearless band as heroes who have reflected lasting glory on the skill and daring of the Italian Navy.

| Total | $780,000 |

Michael Friedsam, in reporting a contribution of $15,000 by R. H. Macy & Co., made the explanation in behalf of that firm that it had contributed directly, instead of taking part in the profit-sharing arrangement between many large retail stores and the Red Cross, because of objections on principle to the profit-sharing plan.

The Red Cross yesterday called attention to the fact that contributions to the Red Cross reduce income tax payments.

"The Federal Income Tax act," a statement said, "as amended Oct. 3, 1917, permits an individual taxpayer to deduct from his net income contributions or gifts devoted to reputable relief or charitable purposes an amount not in excess of 15 per cent. of the taxpayer's income before such deductions are made. The Red Cross is, of course, included in this category.

"President Wilson himself has said: 'The American Red Cross is recognized by law and international conventions as a public instrumentality for war relief,' so those who are interested in the work of the great organization of humanity need feel no apprehension that their contributions from their income can be charged to any intent of withholding from the Government its just dues."

Program for Caruso Concert.

The parterre boxes for the Caruso concert at the Metropolitan Opera House next Monday night for the benefit of the Red Cross were auctioned off by ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard for $26,500 at the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday night. The highest price for a box was $2,000, paid by Clarence W. Mackay.

The program prepared for the benefit by Max Hirsch has been pronounced by Mr. Caruso to be the greatest he has ever seen. It begins with "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Sophia Braslau. Ossip Gabrilowitsch will conduct an orchestral number, "March Slave." Tamaki Miura will sing "Un bel di," from "Madama Butterfly." Harold Bauer will play Schubert's "A Flat Impromptu" and Saint-Saëns's "Valse Etude." Pasquale Amato will sing the "Largo al Factotum" from "Barber of Seville"; Anna Fitziu "Vissi d'arte" from "Tosca," and, with Andreas de Segurola, the Barcarole from "Tales of Hoffmann." Adam Didur has the aria Dulcamera from "Elisir d'Amore," and Mr. Caruso will render several popular selections from his favorite operas.

Leon Rothier will open the second part by singing "La Marseillaise," and Walter Damrosch will conduct the Largo from Dvorák's "New World Symphony." José Mardones will sing "Spain's Homage to Columbia," by Anglada; Frances Alda, an air from "Manon Lescaut." Eddy Brown offers violin selections from Handel, Cue, Paderewski-Kreisler, and Bazzini. Claudia Muzio will sing "O Cielo Assuro" from "Aida"; Riccardo Stracciari a number from Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera"; Caruso and Antonio Scotti will close with the famous duet from "La Forza del Destino." The closing orchestral number will be the intermezzo from Puccini's "Amico Fritz," conducted by Moranzoni.

Over $12,000 Raised at Theatre.

The record for sums contributed at theatres was broken Tuesday night and early yesterday morning at the Ziegfield Midnight Frolic, where $12,258 was raised. Lieutenant Richardson, who lost a leg at the Somme, and Major Matheson, both Canadians, spoke with Will Rogers. John McCormack, who was in the front row, was called upon to sing, and agreed to do so if it was made worth while. Mr. Ziegfield offered a check of $5,000 for the Red Cross, and Mr. McCormack sang two songs for that.

Harry H. Gardiner, who calls himself the "Human Fly," gave a large crowd watching him in Borough Hall Square, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon many thrills by climbing up the face of the Temple Bar office building to the top of the flagstaff on the roof, 205 feet above the street. Gardiner performed the perilous task to arouse interest in a Red Cross drive meeting in the square. He took an hour to make the climb, using only his hands and feet in ascending the thirteen stories. At several floors Gardiner stopped to collect money offered to him by occupants of offices for the Red Cross fund.

Visitors in increasing numbers visited the exhibition of war photographs at the Red Cross gallery at 308 Fifth Avenue. Major Bream of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, a visitor at the gallery, was identified as one of the large figures in a group of officers in one of the Vimy Ridge battle scenes. Major Bream said that he had never seen such vivid pictures of battlefields. Some of the pictures of warfare in this gallery are considered among the greatest examples of photography in existence.

Gifts of paintings worth several thousands of dollars have been made by New York art dealers to the committee of which Michael Friedsam is Chairman to be auctioned off for the Red Cross by Joseph P. Day at the Waldorf-Astoria next Monday evening. Donations have been received from M. Knoedler & Co., the Kleinberger Galleries, Henry Reinhardt & Son, the Ralston Galleries, Lewis & Simmons, the John Levy Galleries, Henry Symons & Co., E. Gimpel & Wildenstein, the Canessa Galleries, Vitall Benguist, the Ehrich Galleries, the Dawson Galleries, and Dikran G. Kelekian. Louis Marks and M. A. Rasko have given samples of their work.

RED CROSS FUND TOTAL NOW $44,070,555

Chairman Davison Urges the Places That Have Oversubscribed to Keep at It.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Nearly one-half of the American Red Cross second $100,000,000 War Mercy Fund had been subscribed on the face of the returns received at headquarters here tonight at the end of the third day's campaign.

The total subscriptions from the twelve districts was $44,070,555, but it was recognized that these figures were incomplete and did not represent the maximum of subscriptions up to this time.

Although success of the campaign seems assured, workers are not letting up, as it is hoped to roll up an oversubscription. The necessity for those chapters, towns and States which have oversubscribed to continue their efforts was emphasized in a statement sent to war fund managers by Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the Red Cross War Council.

Mr. Davison called attention to the fact that the arangements for the campaign were made early in the year, before the recent German drives in Picardy and Flanders, and that changed conditions called for increased Red Cross funds. For that reason he asked all workers not to lessen their efforts to obtain subscriptions until the close of the campaign next Monday night.

None of the divisions yet has reached its quota, but many cities and towns today joined those that were over the top Monday and Tuesday. The total of the Atlantic Division, New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, including New York City, is $16,645,231; of the New England Division, Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island, $1,544,000, and of the Pennsylvania Division, Pennsylvania and Delaware, $1,515,111.

PLUCKY FEAT BY RED CROSS

Workers Enter First Line Trenches to Serve Our Troops.

PARIS, May 22.—The latest feat of the American Red Cross workers in France is going into the first line trenches, serving coffee and chocolate to the American soldiers about to leave for their patrol in No Man's Land, and greeting the men upon their return with fresh supplies of coffee and chocolate, with cigarettes and dry socks.

A cold, rainy night recently was marked by activity of the Red Cross men. The soldiers had messed at 5:30 P. M., and would have had nothing to eat until 6 o'clock the next morning had it not been for the Red Cross workers.

The next day supplies were placed in various dugouts and trenches, and the Americans on night patrol in No Man's Land will have hot drinks until a canteen is established in the immediate vicinity.

NO GERMAN RIFLES HERE, SAYS BECKER

STATE INQUIRY ENDED

Reported Importations Would Fill the Woolworth Building, Tauscher's Associate Says.

Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker yesterday concluded his inquiry into the report that there were a million Mauser rifles, a billion cartridges, and 1,200 machine guns hidden in the vicinity of New York City. After examining several witnesses Mr. Becker anounced that the hearings in the investigation by the State authorities were at an end, and said he would report to the Federal authorities who requested the investigation that there was no truth in the rumors regarding the hidden munitions. He said his investigation had exploded the myth surrounding the reported presence of the German arms and ammunition in this vicinity.

The last witness was Henry Muck, associated with Hans Tauscher, agent in this country for many years of German munition firms. Muck said he was associated with Tauscher from 1907 to 1914, and looked after Tauscher's rifle business.

Muck said that if a million rifles had been shipped to this country the customs officials would undoubtedly know about it. Such a vast quantity of arms, he said, would require the Woolworth Building for storage purposes. There were less than 1,000 Mauser rifles in America, he said, and hardly more than 100 could be found in any one place.

Asked to tell all he knew about the importation of Mauser rifles, Muck said that the largest shipment of which he was aware was 675 rifles in the Summer of 1914, made by Captain Tauscher. These were sold to the Mexican Government, he added.

Gustave Luesing testified that he made a contract with Herman Richards which was supposed to give him the exclusive option on the million rifles. He paid $250 for the option, he said, and he was to receive a commission of a dollar on each weapon when the rifles were sold. Asked if he ever saw the rifles, he said: "I did not see any rifles, only one or two supposed to be samples."

Captain Roger B. Hull of the Enemy Alien Bureau yesterday recommended that Lewis Federige Felix von Kobbe, a German reserve officer, formerly attached to the Death's Head Hussars, be interned for the duration of the war. Von Kobbe is 24 years old and was graduated from the High School and Military College of Gross Lichterfeld, near Berlin. He was arrested up State for failing to notify the authorities of a change of address.

Von Kobbe, according to Captain Hull, was born in Argentina. He was naturalized in Germany and from 1911 to 1913 served in South Africa under the German colors. He came here in 1913 and engaged in farming. He is said to have a brother a Captain in the German Army. He admitted to Captain Hull that he took the reserve officer's oath before leaving Germany, but that he would not live up to it if Germany invaded this country. The young man is now a Lieutenant in reserve.

The Federal authorities yesterday began suit for the cancellation of the naturalization papers of Franz Hagen, a teacher in the Bloomingdale Asylum, on the ground that Hagen, since the United States entered the war, had asserted that in spite of his naturalization he considered himself a genuine German, and that he was ready at any time to give up his American citizenship and to join Germany, and do anything he could to further the German cause.

Henry Westley, 42, of 2,115 Hughes Avenue, was sent to the workhouse for two months by Magistrate Koenig in the West Farms Court yesterday for making disparaging remarks about the American army.

The American Defense Society yesterday telegraphed to the Committee on Privileges and Elections asking for an opportunity to be heard in connection with the investigation of the alleged unpatriotic utterances of Senator La Follette.

Charles R. McGuinness, 41, a physician and graduate of Johns Hopkins University, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Hand in the Federal Court to impersonating a naval officer, and was sentenced to two years in Atlanta Prison.

BRITISH TO STUDY AMERICA.

Special Lectures for Summer Course at Cambridge University.

LONDON, May 22.—Arrangements have been made for a series of special lectures at Cambridge University for the Summer meeting, beginning Aug. 1, when the main subject will be the United States of America, The Times announces. This subject has been chosen because the university authorities believe it "of great importance that the British people should have a fuller knowledge of the national outlook of the United States."

Ambassador Page, who will attend the university at an early date to receive in behalf of President Wilson the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws conferred upon the President, will also deliver the inaugural address at the opening of the August meeting.

Among the lecturers selected for this session are Professors George H. Nettleton, Henry S. Canby, and Henry A. Bumstead of Yale University; J. W. Cunliffe of Columbia, Dr. Santayana, formerly of Harvard, and Sir William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins and now of Oxford.

WOUNDED, FLOATED 7 HOURS

Experience of American Aviator Attached to British Forces.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 21, (Associated Press.)—To lie helpless on his seaplane in the North Sea for seven hours with a broken leg before he was picked up was the experience of an American aviator attached to the British forces.

The aviator, who comes from New York State, was operating a seaplane off the Belgian coast. He was brought down by hostile fire, and his machine fell into the sea. After seven hours he was rescued and is now recovering in a hospital.

The Red Cross a War Blessing

The good done by the American Red Cross cannot be measured in dollars. But it takes dollars, and a great many of them, to accomplish this good. Give of your store freely. Give to-day. Give every day of the drive.

Our Red Cross and Our Allies

On a recent trip to America, Major Murphy, formerly Red Cross Commissioner for Europe, said:

"This is a war of nations, not of armies. There is not a man, woman or child in Great Britain, in Belgium, in France or in Italy that is not a factor in this war. I tell you that if you should go, as I have gone, about those ruined districts in France and had seen little children, four and five years old, driving in the herds at night; had seen little boys coming down the road—little bits of tots—with their arms full of fagots that they were accumulating against the winter; had seen old men and old women working in the fields until it was so dark that as you looked you could just make out those vague forms gathering in the crops for France, you would realize what this war is, what this war means.

"It is not the armies of France that are the essential thing to France in this war, nor the armies of England, nor of the other countries. Those armies will do their part and do it to a finish, if they are supported by the people behind them.

"The great crying need in Europe to-day is to build up the spirit and keep up the spirit of the people behind the lines, and it is that great work which the Red Cross has performed and which has been, up to the recent entrance of our Army on a large scale, the greatest single factor of our help in France since our entry into the war."

The plainest dictates of humanity, as well as obligations of honor to brave allies, demanded that the American Red Cross, financed by the liberality and spirit of the American people, should do all in its power to alleviate the sufferings and support the morale of the soldiers and people who had been suffering so long in a struggle for that liberty which is the foundation stone of our American Republic.

The Canteen System

An extraordinary canteen service is being carried on with the French, with the Belgians, with the Italians, and with the British, by the Red Cross abroad. There are rolling canteens which are operating right up in the trenches, where the soldiers get hot drinks as they go in and when they come out. These canteens are frequently operated under shell fire and gas, the Red Cross workers often working in gas masks.

Before the days of Red Cross help, a French soldier would come back from the trenches on his seven days' leave covered with vermin—officers and all—and go to a junction point for cars to take them home. Those junction points are equipped for 75 people, yet at times there were 4,000 people waiting, sometimes twenty-four, sometimes forty-eight hours. They slept on the ground and they got what food they could.

They brought home vermin which spread disease among the civil population behind the lines, and a discouraging atmosphere born of the conditions through which they passed on their way home. They went back to the lines through the same channels.

The Red Cross has changed this. In conjunction with the French Government, it is now feeding—not giving drinks and sandwiches—but giving hot meals to a million French soldiers every month. There are great recreation halls where they sit and dine and make merry. There are big barracks with bunks along the walls, there are shower baths and disinfecting machinery, so that the men's clothes, while they are bathing, are run through and the vermin killed.

At first these French soldiers were so glad that they did not use the bunks but sat and talked and sang and wondered at what America was doing for them. A prominent French general officer recently wrote to Major Murphy:

"The only thing that matters in this war is to beat the Boche, and to accomplish this the all important factor is the morale of the men. This you have done much to uphold, and the atmosphere you create is more valuable than even you can realize.

"Your work is that of maintaining the morale of the Americans and the French and the Allies, and I wish to thank you in our name and that of General Petain. Your canteens have been well run and kept up to a high standard. Let the men know that they are being cared for not as men only, but as friends; that makes them prefer your canteens to the wine shops. The morale has never been better than now. I need not tell you I feel strongly on this subject, and I am talking to you as man to man. I am speaking not only for myself but for General Petain. He feels as I do toward you and your work, and he endorses every word I have said."

Checking Tuberculosis

The Red Cross is conducting a work against tuberculosis in France which is unparalleled in the history of the world. France has suffered terribly from tuberculosis, brought on by so many of her people living in dugouts and other unwholesome conditions. Tuberculosis has developed in the trenches, too, and the troops are sent back carrying the germs of this dread disease.

In co-operation with the Rockefeller Foundation, the Red Cross is conducting a campaign of education on the care and prevention of this disease. Facilities have been provided to care for bad cases in sanatoriums, and a plan set up which will lead to the establishment of a great system of 800 dispensaries throughout France, with visiting nurses attached.

Four hospitals for tubercular French soldiers are maintained entirely by the Red Cross. At Malabray there is a 135-acre farm in temporary custody of the American Red Cross, where a model village with accommodations for 400 families is being constructed.

The Red Cross is assisting the French medical authorities in rebuilding and reorganizing other hospitals, and is aiding 96 French hospitals devoted to tuberculosis with supplies and funds. Ambroise Rendii, Vice-President of the Paris Municipal Council, says of this work:

"The Americans have fought the good fight against tuberculosis because they have pursued a strategic campaign against an enemy they know and rightly fear. They have taken the necessary measures. You know them well for a practical people; they will not reproach us if we say this of them in the temple of their charity.

"I have seen the program of the social activities the Americans would undertake in our country in the name of the Red Cross. They have drawn up a marvelous program that takes the child from his birth and even before his birth, since the mother also is cared for, and continues the effort all along the line of years. Such is the plan and nothing finer has ever been conceived."

Other Forms of Relief

There is the whole vast program of relief for the refugees and repatries, for those driven before the invader, uprooted from their homes, and for those returned to France and Belgium broken and bent after being subject to the sway of the German for the last few years.

There is the medical and surgical supply service which the Red Cross is giving to over three thousand French military hospitals, the supplies for the most part produced by American women.

There is the Red Cross children's program of caring for needy and destitute children, the reduction of infant mortality. There is the Red Cross factory for the manufacture of artificial limbs. There is the big program of re-education for the mutilated soldier to teach him a means of self-support with its accompanying benefit to France.

Work in other Countries

What the Red Cross is doing for France she is doing, too, for the part of Belgium not held by the Germans, and to a very large degree for Italy. The story of how the American Red Cross rushed to the relief of Italy has already been told. At the time of the Italian disaster last fall, a propaganda was under way in Italy to the effect that America was not really in the war, as we had not yet then declared war on Austria; that we were not well disposed toward Italy; that America had done nothing but lend money to Italy and take back an obligation with interest attached. There was then no official organization that could speak, but the American Red Cross spoke, and she spoke so that the work resulted in the display of the American flag from one end of Italy to the other.

Four days after war was declared by the United States against Austria, the American Red Cross Ambulance Service swung into the Piave Line and took its place beside the brave Italians.

The Red Cross record in Roumania is one which will never be forgotten by that unhappy people. It was only when forced from the country by the capacity of Germany to compel a humiliating peace on Roumania that the American Red Cross left that people to its woes.

The turn of affairs in Russia seriously affected the Red Cross program in that country, but the permanent portion of the Red Cross Commission to Russia is still on hand ready to express America's sympathy and friendliness in terms of fact when that distracted land is ready to receive them.

In Great Britain the American Red Cross is carrying on a large work, and one which is having an excellent effect. The Red Cross is operating a number of hospitals, supporting a number of good works in Great Britain, in co-operation with the British Red Cross and the British Government.

During the Fall of 1917 the American Red Cross made a gift to the British Red Cross of a million dollars. At the time of the great German attack against the British in March, 1918, a gift of an additional million dollars was made to the British Red Cross to purchase hospital supplies, as evidence of America's sympathy in the great trial which Great Britain was enduring.

As so it is in Greece, in Serbia, in Palestine, wherever the ravages of war have gone, the American Red Cross has gone helping armies and peoples.

Constructive Work

"No other organization since the world began has ever done such great constructive work with the efficiency, the dispatch, understanding, often under adverse circumstances, that has been done in France by American Red Cross in the last six months." GENERAL PERSHING.

★ ★ ★

What does General Pershing mean by "constructive work"? He means the share the Red Cross has had in reuniting scattered families, he means homeless children domiciled, bewildered refugees collected and protected, old men and women and babies received from behind the German lines and sent to homes and hospitals, the terrible tubercular scourge and other illnesses grappled with. He means medical and surgical supplies, nurses, hospitals, ambulances and dispensaries, artificial limbs and convalescent homes for the sick French soldiers. He means food, baths, rest, recreation, comfort and cheer for the poilu on leave.

He means that the American Red Cross has helped to sustain the courage, the hope and the patience of our fighting allies, of the soldiers themselves and the soldiers' families. Through the Red Cross the armies and peoples of France and Belgium and the other Allied countries have come to realize that they have friends, and under this touch their spirits have flamed into a new resolution to fight on and bear all.

LIEUT. TAYLOR WINS DESPERATE AIR FIGHT

BOY OF 19 FROM ANDOVER

Captain Peterson Chases Adversary at Forty Kilometers and Sends Him to the Ground.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 21, (Associated Press.)—Lieutenant William H. Taylor of New York chased a German biplane from the American lines to over Pagny-sur-Moselle, north of Pont-a-Mousson, today and defeated the boche in a desperate fight 5,000 meters in the air.

A bullet from the enemy machine barely missed Lieutenant Taylor and punctured a wing of his airplane. A second later the Lieutenant saw one of his tracer bullets penetrate the fuselage of the enemy machine where the observer was working a machine gun, and there was no more fire from the German.

Lieutenant Taylor continued to fire at the German pilot, and after 450 shots had been fired, most of them about 70 yards, the enemy machine went spinning toward the earth in a nose dive.

In addition to Lieutenant Taylor's fight there were several others in the bright, sunny skies today. Two American aviators chased two enemy machines to Thiaucourt and there attacked them. One of the American pilots fired from directly under the tail of a German machine, which went spinning toward the ground from 4,000 meters to 500, where it was seen to straighten out and escape.

Captain David Peterson of Honesdale, Penn., after a long chase, sent a German two-seater airplane wabbling and diving to the ground in the neighborhood of Château Salins today. The American aviator pursued the enemy machine for forty kilometers along the battleline and then chased him twelve kilometers behind the German lines before he succeeded in attacking him from beneath. The German's dive to the ground followed promptly.

Lieutenant Taylor, who is a First Lieutenant in the United States Aviation Corps although he is only 19 years old, was a student at Phillips Academy, Andover, until he went to France as a member of the Andover Ambulance Corps in April, 1916, it was said at the home of his father, William H. Taylor, at the Hotel Ansonia last night. Mr. Taylor said that his son on his arrival in Paris was among members of the Ambulance Corps who volunteered to serve in the Ammunition Transport Corps of the French Army as motor truck drivers. Lieutenant Taylor was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the French Transport Corps. Last August, soon after the arrival of the first contingent of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, he entered the American Aviation Corps as a private, and last November received a commission. Later he was made a Flight Commander in charge of five other flyers and twenty mechanics.

Mr. Taylor said that he had received a letter from Lieutenant Taylor last Sunday which was written just after the young officer had had his first engagement with a German airplane. The following is an extract from the letter:

"For a wonder it was a beautiful day, and the Major of our squadron told us he would take us over the lines. We got way up and for an hour did nothing but fly, and I was beginning to get cold and tired, when suddenly I saw the Major signal 'attention.' Then he started to climb and pretty soon I looked over the side and about 600 feet below I saw a big white circle with a black cross in it. I had been waiting for that moment so long that it did not seem at all out of the way.

"It is funny; I expected that the first time I saw a boche plane, I would be horribly nervous, but that was not the case. I went up a couple of hundred more feet and circled around in case there were any more machines higher up. I stayed there three or four minutes and saw nothing. All the time I was watching the big plane below. All he did was circle slowly around to the right.' There were two of them, but the other was circling to the left, and one of our fellows was already on his tail. As soon as I was sure there were no more machines higher up I went down and dove on his plane. I began to shoot, but my gun jammed, and I was unable to fix it. So after circling around for a few minutes I came home."

AMERICAN FLIER DIED FIGHTING

Potter Fell Flaming Into Sea Under Attack from Seven German Planes—Companion Escaped.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—News of the death of Ensign Stephen Potter, U. S. N. R., who was killed while fighting seven enemy single-seated airplanes in the North Sea on April 25, was received here today from the London representative of the Committee on Public Information. Ensign Potter, who was second pilot to a British Royal Flying Force Captain, six weeks before had shot down a German seaplane in Heligoland Bight.

Potter, according to the information received from London, left the North Sea station in a British seaplane and steered due east until six miles west-southwest of North Hinder Light. Another plane accompanied him and kept a position to starboard throughout the action.

Two enemy planes were sighted to port, heading toward the British and flying low. Both British planes dived, about 100 yards apart, closing upon the nearest German. Fire was opened from both at close range.

Potter's companion had emptied one drum from the forward cockpit, when the gun jammed. Two more hostile planes then appeared overhead, attacking vigorously. Both Britons turned to the west, pursuing one of the lower enemy, who was soon lost to view. Three others passed astern, following at a sharp angle. Potter was close above his companion and dove to within 100 feet of the water.

Both machines flattened out, and Potter's companion, being faster, throttled down until Potter came abreast. Thus they ran westward at full speed, close together for several minutes, under continuous volleys from the rear.

Four more enemy machines now appeared in V formation. Of seven Germans in action, four were attacking Potter and the others his companion. Potter fell behind and began to zigzag. He first veered slightly to starboard, then turned at right angles to port.

Again his companion throttled down to let him catch up, and began climbing to reduce headway. Potter dodged again, but was then broadside to all enemy machines and under their fire only fifty feet from the water. His companion, 250 feet above, saw Potter's machine burst into flames, come down part of the way under control, then crash on the port wing tip.

Potter was last seen on the surface amid flames, which suddenly turned to a huge cloud of smoke. Two of the enemy circled over the spot for a time. When the pall of smoke had cleared not even wreckage was visible.

Potter enrolled Sept. 26 last in the Flying Corps. He was promoted to ensign Nov. 2, and was ordered to France, later being sent to England. A brother lives in the Pasadena Apartments at Detroit, Mich.

The commanding officer of the British North Sea Station wrote:

"Potter always displayed the greatest eagerness to fly at all times. On the long reconnoissance in which he shot down the German seaplane he displayed great courage and coolness. He was very popular at this station."

SAW NO 'FLYING TANKS.'

British Admit, However, That the Germans Have Armored Machines.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—Reports circulated in America that Major Lufbery met his death in a conflict with a so-called German "flying tank" require confirmation, in the opinion of the Royal Air Force expert here, to whom THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent showed a cable dispatch on the subject today. No British airman has yet come across any German armored airplane which could be justly called a "flying tank."

It is no secret that the Germans use a certain amount of armor in the construction of machines specially designed for the purpose of fighting infantry, or, as the British call them, contact patrols. In this line of machine, however, the Germans possess nothing which the Allies cannot or do not turn out equally well or even better. These particular machines are not very different from ordinary battleplanes.

GENERAL PRAISED LUFBERY.

Touching Tribute to "Comrade" in Frenchman's Funeral Address.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 21, (Associated Press.)—The address delivered yesterday by a French General at the grave of Major Lufbery, the American "Ace," who was brought down on the Toul sector by a German airman, was an unusual tribute from one soldier to another. A complete translation of this address is now available. It follows:

"It is not without deep emotion that I come to bid a last farewell to a friend of many years, to a comrade in arms, and to render to him, in the name of the French aerial service, a tribute of our admiration and sympathy. Major Lufbery was one of the first in the struggle.

"After having been for some time with bombing squadrons he joined a pursuit squadron. His remarkable qualities soon stamped him as one of the ablest. In Champagne, at Verdun, and on the Somme, fields of his combats, he gained numerous victories over the enemy and won the admiration of his comrades. But it is to be noted that his simplicity, courage, and calm remained always the same.

"Great was his joy when the Star-Spangled Banner was raised beside our own flag, for the same ideals of liberty and justice. He went with the American Army after having fought with admirable courage in the French Army, furnishing a most noble example for all who witnessed his deeds. He had a large share in surrounding with a halo of glory the first flag of the allied republic on our front, which was entrusted to the Lafayette Squadron.

"Alas! This hero was to die. In attacking a hostile plane he fell in Lorraine, where the heavens had been witness of many combats which he fought with untiring energy. Great was the sorrow of all on learning this sad news.

"Always, my dear Lufbery, with pious thought we shall associate your name, a name dear to all Frenchmen, with this land of Lorraine, where already has ebbed so generously the blood of gallant soldiers of the army of the United States. The memory of you will remain forever graven on our hearts. Joined in common sorrow, two nations are weeping today; your own country, which may well be proud of you, and France, toward which you bore yourself as a true son.

"The love we have for you will be shared by those of your countrymen who cross the ocean to fight at our side. We wish them to say, like the poet: 'Each man has two countries, his own and France.' Au revoir."

TWO SOLDIERS FACE BONNET ROUGE TRIAL

GEN. SARRAIL TO TESTIFY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 22.—Another of a long series of trials connected with the complicated drama of treason and intrigue, in which figure the names of Almereyda, editor of the Bonnet Rouge, Bolo, Malvy, and Caillaux, began today with the arraignment of Sergeant Paix—Seailles, and Captain Mathieu before the Paris court-martial, charged with divulging confidential documents belonging to the War Office.

Paix, who is a wealthy man, was formerly attached to the Ministry of Inventions in Paris, and Maithieu was an orderly officer to General Sarrail when the latter was Commander in Chief at Saloniki.

The judicial inquiry, in its preliminary stages, showed that on Aug. 8 last, when the authorities raided the house of Almereyda, the notorious chief of the Bonnet Rouge gang, who strangled himself with his bootlace in prison shortly after, they found among his papers copies of five important confidential letters which were sent by Sarrail between March and June, 1916, to Messimy, who was then War Minister in the Briand Cabinet, and Noulens, President of the Army Committee.

There were also copies of telegrams from Joffre, then Commander in Chief, and Briand. Paix admitted that he handed these documents to Almereyda for the purpose of using them in a press campaign in favor of Sarrail, and Maithieu made no secret of the fact that it was he who handed the papers to Paix. The use which Almereyda made of the documents was to have them copied and sent by one of the Bonnet Rouge gang to Spain, whence they quickly reached the hands of the Germans.

It is alleged that the documents disclosed important information in regard to the strength of the Saloniki Army, and had real influence in modifying the direction of the campaign on that front.

It is significant that Paix helped to finance the Bonnet Rouge, a notorious defeatist journal, to the extent of $14,000.

Sarrail Painlevé, and Violette are among the witnesses for the prosecution, while General Messimy, former War Minister, and Steeg, another ex-Minister, will be called by the defense. The trial will last several days.

Using Mails to Defraud Charged.

Post Office Inspector Mayhew arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday H. Kent Holmes, head of the United States Promotion House of 27 William Street. He was held in $5,000 bail for examination on May 29 on a charge of having used the mails to defraud investors. It is alleged that Holmes mailed circulars and booklets to persons urging them to invest their money in his concern for the purpose of financing mercantile and manufacturing companies and for the development of mines and oil fields, promising large profits. It was said that Holmes had received $38,000 from persons who had been induced to send him money.

HUGHES'S STAND ON AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

attempt to summarize briefly some of the points discussed in our conference today, particularly with respect to the scope of our inquiry.

It is quite evident, from the material you have already gathered and from the matters discussed with you and Mr. Frierson, that it would be necessary for us carefully to examine all the activities relating to aircraft production. It is easy, of course, theoretically to distinguish between an inquiry within the province of the Department of Justice and one which is aimed merely at alleged waste or neglect or mismanagement or inefficiency apart from any appropriate basis for a civil suit to recover misappropriated moneys or a criminal prosecution. As a practical matter, however, it is evident that in the endeavor to determine whether there is a basis for a civil suit by the Government or a criminal prosecution, it will be necessary for us to make a thorough inquiry into the entire history of aircraft production since the beginning of the war and of all proceedings which have been taken by any persons or corporations concerned therewith. We shall not be able to ascertain whether there has been dishonesty or malversation of any kind unless we go thoroughly into all the transactions which have been had.

If we discover a basis for civil suits by the Government, they will be instituted. If we find grounds for a criminal prosecution, it will be in order to go before the Grand Jury to obtain indictments. If we find no sufficient basis for such proceedings, our conclusion, to be convincing to the country, could not well be stated as a mere negative conclusion in general terms, but should be accompanied by a fair, candid and adequate statement of the facts which our investigation has disclosed. We should, of course, in no case make any statement which, from a military point of view, should not be made, and, if we had a basis for civil or criminal proceedings, we should properly reserve the evidence, so far as it would be appropriately disclosed upon the trial and previously withheld.

But I am very sure that the country would not be content with our inquiry, and particularly if we discover no ground for further proceedings, unless we showed the basis for our conclusion in an adequate report of the facts we have ascertained. This certainly should be dispassionate and impartial and be confined to the facts.

When we are in a position to make such a report of our inquiry we shall know the facts, and it will be reassuring to the country and support our inquiry and its reputation for integrity, if we state concisely, but fairly and completely, the results of our investigation.

If it is understood that we contemplate this course of action, I should suppose that there would be a general disposition to permit our investigation to proceed unembarrassed by any other parallel course of action. Clearly as we may recognize the authority to conduct another official inquiry, at the same time, we cannot doubt that any official inquiry into the same course of conduct, although with another aim, would tend to make difficult, if not impossible, the successful prosecution of our own. Either nothing of importance would be elicited, which would make such an inquiry needless, or points would be brought out which would at once suggest to the guilty, if there be such, where effort should be made to block successful prosecution. Even with the best intention in the world, it would be almost impossible to know in advance what should be gone into and what should be left untouched. We might be following a promising clue, only to find our efforts unintentionally thwarted.

We are instructed to have a prompt and thorough investigation, and my desire is that we should have the fullest opportunity to make such an investigation, and in order that we may have this opportunity it is desirable that it should be generally understood that when we are through we shall state the facts we have ascertained in the manner I have suggested above, to the end that all may be satisfied to await the result of our investigation. When we have reached that result I should suppose that our report would have such thoroughness that it would be accepted as the final statement in the matter, unless, of course, some new evidence not discovered by us should therefore come to light.

Very sincerely yours,
CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Four Sub-Committees Named.

After receiving the letters, Senator Chamberlain called the Military Affairs Committee together to decide what course to pursue. Some of the committee favored going ahead with the inquiry into aircraft, as well as ordnance, and the Quartermaster General's Department. They argued that the committee's investigation would not touch upon any criminal feature and that facts as to inefficiency or deliberate attempts to block aircraft production ought to be investigated by the committee and a frank statement of the findings given to the public. It was pointed out that Mr. Hughes's investigation undoubtedly would run through many weeks, or months, and that the public was entitled to know the facts at once.

As against this viewpoint, other Senators maintained that, out of deference to the opinion expressed by Mr. Hughes, the committee ought not to touch upon aircraft, leaving it entirely for the Department of Justice. Senator Chamberlain himself favored this policy. Various Senators believed that the committee, while avoiding inquiry into aircraft, might proceed with the investigation into ordnance and the Quartermaster General's Department, whicgh will not be embraced in the Hughes inquiry.

The committee was unable to come to any agreement, either as to aircraft, ordnance or the Quartermaster General's Department. Senator Chamberlain, at length, appointed four subcommittees, three to cover the three lines of inquiry mentioned, and the other the matter of "cross license contracts," or interchangeable agreements, among manufacturers of army aircraft, about which there has been some severe criticism in the Senate. These subcommittees are:

Ordnance—Hitchcock, Fletcher, Beckham, Weeks, and Wadsworth.

Cross License—Fletcher, Meyers, Sheppard, Warren, and Knox.

None of the Chairmen of the subcommittees could say tonight if his committee would go into an inquiry. The members are to meet tomorrow or Friday to come to a decision. In the meantime the Military Affairs Committee will confer, as a whole, to see if any program can be mapped out.

"I don't know what the Sub-committee on Aircraft may decide to do," said Senator Thomas, its Chairman, tonight. "I have not talked with any of the members. My own impression is that Mr. Hughes's letter will carry weight with the committee, and that the inquiry may be abandoned at this time. But I am not positive about it."

Senator Hitchcock, Chairman of the Sub-committee on Ordnance, favors going ahead with that line of inquiry. Senator McKellar, head of the Subcommittee on the Quartermaster General's Department, is disposed to proceed with that investigation. The outcome of the situation may be the abandonment of the aircraft investigation and the prosecution of the others. In any event, it is believed by Senators, the inquiries will be conducted largely in secret.

"The contemplated inquiries would all go into matters that, to a large extent, it would be unwise to disclose to the public without full knowledge of the facts," said Senator Chamberlain. "If the investigations proceed, they will be thorough, and a full report will be forthcoming at their conclusion."

"WORK OR FIGHT" PLAN FOR DRAFT AGE MEN

Government to Round Up All Idlers and Use Them, Says South Carolina Governor.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 22.—Governor Manning, returning today from Washington, announced that the War Department was planning to round up all idlers of draft age in the country and make use of their services.

It was planned, the Governor said, to take all men of deferred classification who are not engaged in some necessary occupation and make use of their services, either in the army or in war work.

Every man of draft age must work or fight, the Governor said.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Such a "work or fight" plan as Governor Manning said at Columbia today the Government was planning to put into effect was proposed by military officials about two months ago and received the indorsement of the Department of Labor. The proposal was then laid before President Wilson and there has been no announcement as to whether the President approved or disapproved.

As discussed here, the plan was to purge the lists of registrants of all men not engaged in some useful industry by giving them the alternative of going to work or being drafted.

Railroad Wage Increase Is Near.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—An announcement of a general wage increase for railway employes, following in a general way the Railroad Wage Commission's recommendations, but with many modifications, is imminent. It was learned tonight that Director General McAdoo, who has been studying the commission's report, will be ready to act within a few days.

The Outstanding Masterpiece of the War

The Infamy of the Teutons Exposed by a Hungarian Army Officer

IT is true that everyone doesn't want to read war books. A great many books are war books and nothing else, but even if "Men In War" were nothing else, it is hardly likely you would feel that you could afford to overlook the book which Theodore Dreiser says is "far and away the greatest war book I have yet read," and which the Philadelphia Press calls "by far the outstanding masterpiece of the war."

Stuart P. Sherman writes us, "'Men In War' is a book written with memorable power of expression. I wish a copy of it could be put in every household in the Central Empires." John Haynes Holmes says: "'Men In War' is unquestionably one of the supremely great books produced by the Great War and like 'Under Fire,' makes all other war books seem trivial." Brander Matthews says: "Of all the war books I have read, this seems to me the most powerful in its stark presentation of reality as reality is imagined by an artist who has seen what he is describing." From all over the United States come similar expressions of opinion from other distinguished people.

But "Men In War" is more than a war book. Latzko is primarily a great literary artist, a word painter rarely equalled in the history of literature. Everybody is asking "Who is this Andreas Latzko? Is he really an Austrian army officer 'as advertised'?" The Chicago Evening Post after saying "'Men In War' is comparable only with 'Under Fire,'" questions whether the real name of the author is given, because the first edition of the book was published anonymously in Switzerland. The Post even questions whether the portrait bust of him that has recently appeared in so many of the newspapers is authentic. Andreas Latzko is not a pseudonym. The first edition of his book did not bear his name because he had not yet made his way to Switzerland from his Hungarian regiment. His name is printed on subsequent editions, and we shall shortly publish another book written by him.

It seems that nobody in this country had heard very much about Latzko or "Men In War" before last January, and we feel that it is a distinct achievement for a young publishing house to have its imprint on what is being called by the most competent critics in the country the greatest book the war has yet produced. Many people are congratulating us on what they call a peculiar stroke of good fortune. If good fortune consists in continually hunting for the best books that we can find, regardless of their apparent commercial value, we modestly accept the congratulations. Finding good books isn't an especially easy matter. Ninety-nine out of a hundred manuscripts that are submitted are valueless for our purposes. The great war has made it increasingly difficult to get good books from abroad. But on January 12th, the New York Evening Post published a long and unusually flattering review of "Menschen im Krieg" (Men In War), which so impressed all of us that the Swiss edition of this book was immediately secured from a local bookstore, read that afternoon and evening, and at about three o'clock on Sunday morning we sent a cable offer to the Swiss publishers. About a week afterward we received a reply that five offers had been made by cable by American publishers, but that as our offer was received first and was satisfactory, the book was ours.

We urge everybody who has confidence in the Boni & Liveright imprint to read "Men In War." Although the first edition of the book was not distributed until the second week of April, and although review copies were sent out only a couple of weeks ago, the book is now in its third edition and is creating more discussion than any book that has been published this year. Publications that received the book too late to print adequate reviews in the editions then going to press, felt it a work of such grest importance that they printed pictures of Latzko with such captions as "The author of 'Men In War,' that observer and critic who cannot be neglected in making our estimate of the war" (N. Y. Evening Sun). "This is a picture of Andreas Latzko, an Austrian officer, author of 'Men In War,' which has been described as as great a book as 'Under Fire'—review to appear shortly" (Chicago Tribune). "Now comes Andreas Latzko's "Men In War,' which lies unopened on my desk, but arrives recommended by an universal panegyric" (Detroit News). Such treatment would hardly be accorded the book unless it were recognized as one of vital significance, not only as a human document treating of the war, but as a work of literary art. As the New York Sun says, "It has all the flaming red realism that characterizes many of the personal narratives of the war, but it has in addition artistry and style that set it far above them. The author's imagery of description is vivid and individual, his metaphors apt and illuminating. Each of his characters is limned in such lifelike colors that we say they are. Inevitably it challenges comparison with 'Under Fire,' and not to its disadvantage. 'Men In War' deserves to live."

"Men In War" has not only provoked unusual discussion because it is a great war book and a great work of art, but because of the fearlessness of its author, because of its outspoken detestation of Prussian ruthlessness and autocracy. Even though now in Switzerland, Latzko's whereabouts can hardly be unknown to the military-mad Prussian officials, who, it is said, are making every effort to apprehend him. Christopher Morley, who said in his review of the book in the Boston Transcript headed "The Infamy of the Teutons," "'Men In War' is one of the big books of the war," added "If the Teutonic military authorities ever get hold of it, the author will go straight to a firing squad." The New York Times in reviewing the book says, "Bitterly, angrily, madly, Latzko attacks the Fatherland that fights not for defense but for conquest; the Fatherland whose simple folk are tricked and maimed and murdered by the cant and the greed of their rulers, the Fatherland whose war, let loose upon the world, this Austrian hates." The Sun wrote on April 28th, "This is no book for a Prussian and you may be sure that the volume will not be circulated in Germany." But we know that the book has been read in Germany, and that Latzko is wanted there.

It is impossible in the space available to indicate one-half of the criticism and comment that has appeared on this remarkable book, but we ask our readers whether the heading we have chosen for this advertisement seems extravagant on the evidence we have presented.

"Men In War" can be purchased wherever books are sold, for $1.50 per copy. If your dealer should be temporarily out of it, we will send it to you for $1.60 postpaid, and shall also be glad to send you our Spring catalog listing our miscellaneous publications and the fifty titles now included in the Modern Library.

The Relief That Appeals to All Humanity

The Red Cross is binding up and healing the wounds of war—it is bringing relief to the most terrible misery and suffering the world has ever known.

It appeals to everyone who loves his fellow man.

And now, the Red Cross comes nearer to every American heart. For it is bringing to our millions of American boys in arms the aid and comfort that each of us would so gladly give them personally if we could.

In barracks, in canteen, in trench, in hospital, and on shell-swept battlefields, the Red Cross is supplying surgical and medical aid, the material comforts of life, and a ready aid and sympathy that is a heartening message from home to American soldiers and sailors.

It is when the need is greatest, when the boys are thinking of home and mother, that the Red Cross acts.

It is doing these things alike for Americans—and for France, England, Italy, Serbia, Rumania and Belgium, for the people of these countries have been fighting our battles and have a need that is great.

If you could only see the needs which your money meets, the gratitude of those to whom it is a matter of life and death, you would give several times as much as you have intended to give.

If you could go to Europe you would understand why those who talk about it have fire in their eye and a tremor in their voice.

END OF RATIONING FRANCE IN SIGHT

FIXING PRICES OF MEAT

Municipalities to Combat Profiteering—Warning to Greedy Restaurant Keepers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 21.—Victor Bôret, the French Food Controller, delighted Paris this morning by announcing that the outlook had so greatly improved that the end of food restrictions was in sight. He said that the drastic measure instituting three meatless days a week had already produced such excellent results that it would be necessary to enforce it for only a short period, and no alternative system of meat cards would be required.

At the some time M. Boret said that if the harvest fulfilled present promises it would be possible to increase the existing bread ration of ten and a half ounces a day for each adult to something more substantial.

Equally good news is the Food Controller's statement that a new system of price restriction is to be enforced. Wholesale and retail dealers in foodstuff, since the institution of meatless days, have ruthlessly raised prices to an extent which the Minister has publicly denounced as scandalous. The price of fish, for instance, which is one of the few possible substitutes for meat, has risen enormously. Soles, which sold at wholesale at 6 francs a bundle on May 1, were quoted at 14 francs on May 15, the first meatless day. Eggs rose proportionately, while meat itself soared to figures out of all reason.

M. Boret has already made strong efforts to remedy the scandal by inducing the Paris City Council to open twelve municipal butcher shops, where meat is sold at a fixed price. This week-end the first consignment of eight tons of beef bought by M. Boret in the provinces was transported to Paris, slaughtered under his control, and distributed among the municipal shops and the working-class co-operative stores, and a certain number of ordinary butchers, who agreed to sell at prices fixed by the City Council. This system is to be extended until the meat so provided equals one-tenth of the daily consumption of Paris.

The Food Controller now announces a drastic extension of the methods of fighting the greed of food speculators. By Government decree the sale price of all meat will in future be fixed by the municipalities throughout France, or by the Prefects, if the former decline to act. The holding back of meat supplies by speculators, which has been practiced to a shocking extent in Paris in order to force prices up, will be met by a law requiring that all meat be placed on the market the day after its arrival from the slaughter houses, under penalty of requisition.

Restaurants whose prices have made eating almost impossible lately are also to be made to toe the mark by the establishment, if other means fail, of prices fixed by the State.

In order to compel cattle raisers to declare their stocks truthfully, forage cards are to be put in use, allowing only enough fodder for the number of head declared.

It is also announced that all condensed milk must be placed on sale within a year of the date of its manufacture. Holders will have four months in which to dispose of their existing stocks, which are known to be enormous.

PARIS, May 21.—Prospects for the coming harvest in France are better than in any year since 1890, Victor Boret, Food Minister, informed The Associated Press on his return today from a week-end tour in the country.

"Unless unforeseen situations arise between now and harvest time," he added, "actual restrictions on food consumption will not be increased. I may even say that we are approaching the end of the era of restriction, and that the restrictions at present in force gradually will be eliminated.

"But I want men for the harvest. If they can be found I can promise that I will diminish the importation of cereals and release important tonnage."

M. Boret presented to the Council of Ministers several measures tending to decrease the cost of living. These include the placing of a tax on cattle on the hoof, sheep and hogs, a census of French cattle, the reorganization of the La Vilette stockyards and the building of refrigerating warehouses there. The Minister said he intended to make "a small Chicago" out of the La Vilette stockyards.

GENERAL WEAVER RETIRES.

Regret Expressed and He May Be Rcalled to Active Service.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Major Gen. Erasmus M. Weaver, Chief of Coast Artillery, U. S. A., will be 64 tomorrow, and by law will be placed on the retired list for age. His duties as a member of the War Council will end with his retirement, but it was indicated in a high quarter today that he might be called for important active service as soon as he had taken a rest from the fatigue occasioned by the constant attention that he has given to public business before and since the entrance of the United States into the war.

Secretary Baker showed today that no officer stood higher in his estimation for ability and conscientious attention to duty that General Weaver. Mr. Baker spoke of the fact that General Weaver had entered the service of the United States as a cadet at the West Point Military Academy the year Mr. Baker was born, and has been constantly at work since then seeking to bring the army to a high state of efficiency. Deep regret was expressed by Mr. Baker that General Weaver would have to retire.

General Weaver was one of the officers of the regular establishment who began many years ago to devote themselves to the effort to perfect the army in methods of scientific warfare. He was an artilleryman and sought in every way to learn all the ins and outs of advanced artillery science. While at Fort Monroe as a Captain he developed mortar battery practice to such a point of perfection that he was able to have his mortars drop shells one after another in Hampton Roads within a charted space ten feet square at a distance of three miles. The great utility of howitzer or mortar warfare in the war in Europe has demonstrated how far-seeing were General Weaver and the other mortar battery experts of years ago.

MILLION MEN NOW READY TO EMBARK

"When war was declared in April, 1917, the standing army of the United States consisted of 136,000 officers and men, many of whom were in the foreign service, and the National Guard consisted of 164,000 officers and men, many of whom were too old for active service and a large part of them physically unfit for the work for which they had volunteered.

"Our experts told us it would take two years to raise an army of 1,000,000 men and five years to train the commissioned personnel. It has now been about one year since the first legislation was passed authorizing the increase of our army for war purposes.

Total Strength of Army.

"The strength of our military forces is now as follows:

| | Officers. | Men. |
|---|---|---|
| Regular army | 10,295 | 504,677 |
| Reserve Corps | 79,038 | 78,560 |
| National Guard | 16,906 | 411,952 |
| National army | 33,894 | 510,963 |
| Special and technical duty | 8,195 | .... |
| Drafted in April | .... | 150,000 |
| Drafted in May | .... | 273,742 |
| Grand total | | 2,078,222 |

"So we have today," continued Mr. Caldwell, "an army of more than 2,000,000, of which more than 500,000 have already been shipped to France, and 1,000,000 more have the necessary training to fit them for foreign service. They are now waiting for the ships to carry them over.

"Our critics now complain that we have not done more, yet we have done in one year twice as much as they thought we could do in two years."

Mr. Caldwell recalled to the attention of Congress statements by various allied commissions which, he said, had advised America to send materials, not men. He continued:

"Under the legislation that Congress passed in spite of the recommendations from the Allies, we have already raised more than 2,000,000 men and early in the year 1919 will have 3,000,000 in the army. We have now taken the 'lid off' so that President Wilson may have as great an army as necessity requires and our manpower permits. Notwithstanding the fact that the appropriation measure now pending is drawn with the view of supporting an army of only 3,000,000, I am confident that before many months, deficiency appropriations may be necessary. We will probably have 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 men before the end of the next fiscal year."

Mr. Caldwell's estimate of man-power in America was: Two million men now in the army; 2,000,000 more in Class 1 waiting to be called, and 1,000,000 additional in the class of men who have become 21 this year. Classes 2, 3, 4, and 5, he said, had 6,000,000 other men, and there were 3,000,000 boys between 18 and 21. He estimated, therefore, that if the war lasted until 1924, there would be 6,000,000 more men, all of Class 1. He said the total number of men of military age in 1924 would be 20,000,000, out of a total population of 125,000,000.

Building of Cantonments.

Mr. Caldwell said that the building of thirty-two cantonments, made necessary because there was not enough cloth in the world to shelter the army planned, used in ten weeks more human labor than went into the building of the Panama Canal. Clothing had been supplied, he said, by taking over carpet, ducking, and similar factories, so that "we have now an ample reserve of every kind of clothing for our soldiers."

"England," declared Mr. Caldwell, "trained her first million men in citizens' clothes and top hats, with walking sticks for guns, but notwithstanding our difficulties, our first million men were clothed in uniforms and were drilled in the manual of arms with a rifle."

The delay of the United States for experimenting so that it might get the best possible rifle was now vindicated, said Mr. Caldwell, for "production is now ample" and the rifle is of the highest quality.

"When General Joffre requested a small expeditionary force," he concluded, "the critics of the Administration demanded what they thought was impossible, that we ship to France in the first year 50,000 to 100,000 men.

"In the first ten days of May we shipped 90,000. Within a year after the first shipment America will have 1,000,000 of the best fed, best clothed, and best paid soldiers in France that the world have every known. It will have been trained under the modern conditions, surrounded by the best moral influences, with the lowest precentage of disease, and will be served by the highest motives that actuate men."

"SLOW" ACCOUNTS mean something more than the mere matter of delay in receiving payment of bills.

THEY MEAN DUPLICATION OF EFFORT, the maintenance of records and additional officework that would be unnecessary if such accounts were paid within the reasonable specified time.

THORMAHLEN MOWS DOWN SOX BATSMEN

PIPP'S RAP DECIDES ISSUE

Wallie Sends Baker Over the Plate with the Run That Conquers Chicago Champions.

Youth will be served, and served it was at the Polo Grounds yesterday, when Lefty Thormahlen of the Yanks pulled through a winner in a sharp, seething flinging duel with Eddie Cicotte of the White Sox. For fourteen innings the youngster of the Huggins staff had to show his grit and gameness to hold his own against the cunning and generalship of the famous knuckle-ball veteran of the world's champions.

Wallie Pipp brought the altercation to a close with a vicious rap to centre in the last of the fourteenth, which hustled Frank Baker over the platter with the jubilant unit which gave the Yanks victory by a 1-to-0 count. The long-delayed triumph put the Yanks back into second place.

Thormahlen had the tougher job, for the Sox maulers hit him more often than the Yanks could solve Cicotte. There were three errors behind the Yank southpaw, but he overcame these obstacles with a masterly exhibition of mound skill. Time and again he was in a hole, but his courage never faltered, and he turned the best of the Sox hitters back to the bench with a clever pitching display, which marks him as one of the season's finds.

It was Clark Griffith Bat and Ball Day at the park, but the threatening weather kept the crowd down, and President Ruppert will have another benefit for the soldiers' fund when the Yanks return after the coming Western trip. There were large detachments of doughboys and jackies there yesterday from Governors Island, Fort Hamilton, Pelham Bay, Fort Slocum, Fort Wadsworth, Camp Merritt, and Camp Mills, and after the game they were all presented with baseball outfits, which included bats, balls, gloves, mitts, chest protectors and masks. The soldiers had two brass bands along, and they made things lively during the long, tense diamond struggle.

Peck on the Jump Throughout.

In spite of three errors in Thormahlen's support he received glittering assistance in the field, especially from Roger Peckinpaugh and Frank Gilhooley. Peck swept his territory clean of numerous White Sox drives which were ticketed hits, and in the twelfth, when Buck Weaver threatened to break up the game with a home-run drive to deep right, Gilhooley scampered back on the soft, muddy turf, pulled down a tremendous drive, and then rolled over in a somersault, but clutched the ball for dear life.

Thormahlen did some truly wonderful pitching in the tenth and fourteenth innings, when it appeared as if the world's champions were sure to smash his praiseworthy performance. In the tenth, with two out and Weaver on third, Thormahlen walked Shano Collins intentionally and waited to take a chance at Schalk. The little Sox catcher tried hard to knock the ball out of the lot, but Thormahlen struck him out and the soldiers set up a din which lasted several minutes.

The fourteenth inning was a terrific strain on weak hearts. Liebold, the first Sox up, was safe when his easy grounder breezed through Pipp at first. McMullin sacrificed Nemo to second, and a sharp safe crack to left by Eddie Collins sent the runner to third. Hap Felsch, a dangerous batsman, was up, and Thormahlen walked him and jammed the bases. The Yanks' youthful southpaw then turned on the steam and the best that Buck Weaver could do was to slap a grounder at Baker, who fired the ball home to Hannah and forced Liebold at the plate.

here was still plenty of danger in the Sox layout with Gandil at the bat. The crowd turned loose a sigh of great relief when Gandil hoisted a high fly to Miller in centre.

Cicotte Has Yanks in Hand.

Up to the fourteenth inning Cicotte held the Yanks in almost complete submission. For thirteen innings he gave them only four hits, only two of these by Baker and Miller being clean drives. The knuckle ball, the shine ball, and all the other tricks in Cicotte's kit were brought into perfect execution. Pipp twice reached third base, once in the second and again in the tenth, but none of the other Yanks got beyond first.

Miller got as far as second in the thirteenth, but he went to seed there. The last of the fourteenth saw the crowd pulling hard for the courageous young Yank portsider, and when he pulled out of the deep excavation after the bases had been loaded with White Sox twice there wasn't a fan inside the park who didn't want to see him win.

Peck was the first Yank up in the last of the fourteenth, and he died at first. Baker then beat out a hit to deep short, even after Weaver had made a marvelous stop. Pratt shot a single to centre and put Baker on second. Cicotte was weakening and the crowd was yelling like mad for the tense, uncertain struggle to end. Pipp, who had not been able to land solidly on Cicotte's curves, pounded a single to centre, and Baker romped home with the victory.

SUPERBAS SUCCUMB WHEN BRUINS RALLY

Cheney Wavers in Eighth and Cubs Carry Off Fruits of Victory by 2 to 1.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Larry Cheney, Brooklyn's dependable veteran, weakened in the face of a late batting rally by the Cubs this afternoon, and just when the Dodgers had the game won by a 1-to-0 score, Chicago pounded out a 2-to-1 victory.

For seven innings Cheney and Hendrix waged a close pitching battle and neither array of batters were able to break through to the plate. Cheney was a bit wild at times, but his support pulled him through. He hit two of the Cubs' batsmen and uncorked a wild pitch.

Brooklyn broke through Hendrix in the first of the eighth. Cheney singled to left and Olson's drive bounced off Hendrix's bare hand, but Chuck Deal recovered the ball in time to get it to Kilduff and force Cheney. O'Mara lifted a high foul to O'Farrell. Daubert smashed a single to right and when the ball got away from Eddie Flack, Olson crossed the plate and Daubert pulled up at third.

Hendrix walked Zach Wheat intentionally and then Zach stole second. Hi Myers had a great chance to distinguish himself, but ended the Brooklyn activity by lifting a fly to Flack.

The Cubs brought on their rally in their half of the same inning. Flack singled to right and Hollocher sacrificed him to second. After Mann flied to Johnston, Kilduff singled back of first and Flack scored with the tying run. Paskert walked and Deal poked a single to centre, sending Kilduff home with the winning tally.

FORDHAM'S HITS ARE FUTILE

Maroon Gets Nine Blows, but Fort Slocum Wins with Only One.

Although Bill Finn, the Fordham twirler, allowed only one hit, the Maroon collegians were defeated by the Fort Slocum nine on Fordham Field yesterday by a score of 1 to 0. Ray Fisher, the ex-Yankee pitcher who topped the mound for the soldiers, was nicked for nine hits, four of which came in the ninth inning, and still Fordham failed to score. In this frame Coletti and Lefevre were nipped at the plate, while two other Fordham players were similarly caught in previous innings. Finn fanned twelve batters.

In the first inning Sturquel reached first when Halligan, who supplanted Scanlon as catcher, dropped a third strike. Sturquel stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a squeeze play, with Charles supplying the bunt.

N. Y. U. HUMBLES WESLEYAN

Heavy Hitting Toward Close of Game Gives 7 to 2 Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., May 22.—The Wesleyan baseball team had a disastrous three innings toward the close of the game with New York University here this afternoon, and the visitors batted out a victory by a score of 7 to 2. Hall and Sano were sent into the box by Wesleyan to save the game, but were ineffective.

The Wesleyan batters were helpless before Sulzer, the visiting twirler, who allowed only five hits and fanned nine men. Curtis's home run was the one bright spot in the Wesleyan batting department.

PIRATES NOSE OUT PHILS.

Cooper Drives Across Winning Run in Twelfth Inning.

PITTSBURGH, May 22. — Pittsburgh and Philadelphia played a twelve-inning game here today, which the Pirates won, 6 to 5. Jacobs, who went to the mound for Pittsburgh in the opening inning, was relieved by Harmon in the second, but not until the visitors had tallied four times. The first two batters in the tenth inning touched Harmon for clean hits, and he was removed, giving way to Cooper, who retired the side scoreless.

ETRUSCAN GALLOPS AWAY FROM FIELD

Startling Reversal of Form by Vivell's Entry Causes Investigation by Stewards.

E. G. Vivell's Etruscan came to life yesterday and won the Newtown Selling Stakes at six furlongs, which was the feature of the racing card at Jamaica. The victory of the son of Burgomaster entailed such a startling reversal of form that the stewards acted promptly and decided to refuse the entries of owner Vivell, pending further investigation.

The unexpected success of Etruscan was only one incident in a day of disaster for the players. Not a favorite won during the afternoon; even in a two-horse race the public finally settled on J. E. Widener's Trompe La Mort as the choice, only to have John Sanford's Achilles lead him to the finish.

Etruscan's record during the last few days was sufficient to cause him to be overlooked in the speculation, so that he started at odds of 30 to 1, with the Quincy Stable's Compadre the favorite. On Saturday Etruscan and Compadre both competed in a three-horse race. The former was well played by the public, but at no stage of the race did he display any of the speed for which he is noted, and Compadre won in a gallop by six lengths. Further evidence of the unfitness of Etruscan came Monday, when he was brought out again for the Clarendon Handicap and, with odds of 20 to 1 against him, finished next to last in a field of eight.

He was a different animal yesterday, and leaped to the front shortly after the rise of the barrier to set a pace that soon had the others dizzy behind him. Walls, on Compadre, did his best to follow in the flying footsteps of Etruscan, but was forced to give way in the stretch. L. Feustel's He Will, the second choice, began to loom up then, but never had a chance to catch the winner, which sailed across the line well in hand and a length and a half to the good. The investigation by the stewards followed, and so far as could be learned the only explanation given for the form somersault was the slight change in track conditions.

Turf and Rio formed the Butler entry in the sixth race, but both were unplaced. F. Ambrose Clark, whose colors are generally seen in steeplechases, supplied the winner in the imported Shanballymore.

UPSET IN JUNIOR TENNIS.

Bassford and Donaldson Vanquish Taylor and Emerson in Semi-Final.

One decided surprise marked the first day of play in the doubles tournament to determine the junior tennis championship of Brooklyn at the Terrace Club yesterday. In the semi-final round of the event, which went forward by leaps and bounds because of the numerous defaults, Abraham Bassford, 3d, and Gerald Donaldson, Jr., obtained a place in the finals when they defeated the formidable combination of Harold Taylor and Gerald Emerson in a sharply played three-set match, with the score 6—4, 2—6, 6—4. The victors showed some pretty combination work on the court, while the rival pair was handicapped by the wildness of Emerson, who could not depend on his drives going true.

In the boys' singles tournament Cecil Donaldson obtained a place in the semi-finals when he defeated S. F. Phlesinger, 6—0, 6—2.

The summaries:

Junior Doubles.—First Round—R. Kynaston and A. Silverman defeated H. Wycoff and R. J. Clark, 6—4, 6—3.

Semi-Final Round—A. Bassford, 3d, and G. Donaldson, Jr., defeated Harold Taylor and G. Emerson, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4.

TENNIS PROBLEM ON TAPIS.

Equalization of Voting Power to be Discussed in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 22.—The next meeting of the Executive Committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association will be held here on July 4, and it is expected that the question of equalization of voting power which has become a bone of contention between Eastern and Western tennis circles will be thrashed out at that time. The date set for the meeting by Julian S. Myrick, acting President of the tennis association, brings it during the week of the National Clay Court Tennis Championship of the United States, and it is believed that nearly the entire Executive Committee will be represented. It is therefore believed that some definite basis for future action will be determined which will be acceptable to the entire country.

DOUGLAS HAS BEST NET CARD ON LINKS

Princeton Player Leads Field of 53 in Annual University Club Golf Tourney.

F. H. Douglas of Princeton led the field of fifty-three golfers who participated yesterday in the annual Spring tournament of the University Club, held this year over the links of the St. Andrew's Golf Club at Mount Hope, N. Y. The play was at thirty-six hole medal play handicap, in morning and afternoon rounds, and at the conclusion of the day's golf thirty-one contestants returned full cards. Douglas carried off the chief prize for the tournament, that offered for the best net score, when he returned a card of 181 26—155 for the total distance.

This was two strokes better than the effort of H. H. Fries of Columbia, who captured second prize with 185, 28—157. For third prize there was a tie between A. F. Mabon, Rutgers; L. A. Gillet, Yale, and T. F. Wilcox, Princeton, all of whom finished with net scores of 160 strokes. Wilcox, however, accounted for the prize offered for the best net score in the afternoon round, and he was eliminated from the day's net tie, leaving Mabon and Gillet tied for the prize.

The laurels for the day's best gross score fell to S. C. Mabon, Rutgers, who went over the thirty-six holes in 171 strokes. His handicap was four, however, and with a net score of 167 he finished far back of the net leaders. Mabon also returned the best gross round for eighteen holes when he went over the course in the morning competition for a 79. This was five strokes better than the card of his nearest rival, but because of his leading gross effort in the thirty-six holes play, he was ineligible for the prize in the morning round. This went to George T. Brokaw of Princeton, who had an 84.

The golfers this year, duplicating the conditions of last year, competed for engraved certificates. These awards were made in the cases of all prize winners. The financial returns from the tournament, resulting from entrance fees, were donated to the Y. M. C. A. Last year the money was turned over to the Red Cross.

The scores:

F. H. Douglas, Princeton, 181, 26—155; H. H. Fries, Columbia, 185, 28—157; T. F. Wilcox, Princeton, 180, 20—160; A. F. Mabon, Rutgers, 192, 32—160; L. A. Gillet, Yale, 196, 36—160; G. S. ### St. Louis Directors Will Discuss Plan for Raising Amount.

ST. LOUIS, May 22.—Directors of the St. Louis National League club will meet here Friday to discuss plans for raising $50,000 for the purchase of players to bolster up the lagging Cardinals.

One of the plans suggested provides for the assessment of twenty-five of the stockholders to the amount of $2,000 each.

Members of the board denied rumors that Roger Hornsby would be sold to raise money. W. C. Anderson, one of the Directors, said the team would retain Hornsby as long as there was a dollar left in the treasury.

See how gracefully the curves of each are blended. Few indeed are the cars which match it in appearance, or in which the modern bevel-edge body (originated by Studebaker) has been so perfectly developed.

Its power-resources are marvelous. Its "touring range" is ample for ordinary driving; its "emergency range" gives express train speed and power. Yet this is really an economical car to run. Even its tire-economy is notable.

Its stamina has been proven by 40,000 miles of driving under the severest conditions. Its finish, equipment and appointments are of the highest quality.

FINE TUNES LULL 'ROCK-A-BYE BABY'

SOME HILARIOUS MOMENTS

Jerome Kern's Score May Carry Piece Through the Summer—Edna Hibbard in Leading Role.

The musical comedy makers, in pursuance of their drive to convert all the farces of yesterday into musical shows, reached Margaret Mayo's "Baby Mine" at the Astor Theatre last night. "Rock-a-Bye Baby," as the musicalized version is called, has one of the best scores which Jerome Kern has written for a season or more, a dozen good looking and well dressed girls, two handsome sets of scenery, no singing to speak of, and several hilarious moments inherited from Miss Mayo's farce. It is hopefully put forward by the management as a Summer show, and, as its weaknesses are no greater than those of the average musical piece, it appears reasonably certain to be one.

Strangely enough, the principal weakness of "Rock-a-Bye Baby" is that its adapters selected too good a farce to work upon. Miss Mayo's story does not surrender itself readily to musical treatment; it persists in showing signs of life just when the librettist is congratulating himself that he has clubbed it to death. It has movement, it is closely knit, and it is too good a tale to stand idly by while the principals and the friends of the principals sing pleasant little melodies which have nothing to do with the case.

At the climax of the farcical situation, for example, it becomes necessary for the story to be left dangling while the heroine sits up in bed to assist in the singing of a song entitled "There's No Better Use for Time Than Kissing." The number, furthermore, is sung with two rank outsiders, persons totally unconnected with the plot, who just happened to enter the lady's boudoir. At that, one of them is a man, and almost a stranger. It is true that musical comedy lays no claim to relevance as one of its charms, but in the case of so hardy a farce as "Baby Mine" these matters should be better arranged. There were half a dozen other spots, equally inappropriate, where the story was halted and musical numbers forcibly inserted.

Had they been any one's musical numbers but Mr. Kern's the result probably would have been disastrous, as it was, it was merely unfortunate. There are four or five high spots in the Kern score—his best, undoubtedly, since "Oh, Boy!" The kissing number is one of them, and, "According to Dr. Holt," is another one, and "My Own Light Infantry," a charming nursery number, is still another. For that matter, there was not one tune in the fifteen which it was not good to hear.

There is a Summer breeziness and a good taste about the production which promises to do considerable for it. Its cast is capable, but not distinguished. The rôle of Zoie, which was Marguerite Clark's when the piece was a straight farce, is handled by Edna Hibbard. Miss Hibbard is an agreeable enough ingenue of the Marguerite Clark-Madge Kennedy type, who looks cute, sings a little, but not much, and does nothing which is really wrong.

Dorothy Dickson and her shoulders caught the fancy of last night's audience. In addition to dancing, for which she is already noted here, Miss Dickson played a small part and acquitted herself nobly. Louise Dresser, as blondily pretty as ever, sang three or four numbers and generally abetted the job of baby snatching, and Walter Jones, in his old rôle of the cradle robber, supplied most of the humor. The husband was played by Frank Morgan, hitherto of the movies.

NO SWEETS AND BE SLENDER

Philadelphia Food Chief's Advice to Those Who Would Have "War Figure."

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—The ideal "food administration figure" has been defined in a statement issued by Jay Cooke, 3d, local Food Administrator.

"Eat less candy this Summer," says Mr. Cooke in his heart-to-heart talk with women. "The less sugar you eat, the more slender and graceful you will become. Besides, you are conserving food elements for our allies and fighting the Hun while you stay at home.

"There are hundreds of thousands of children and young people, of both sexes in Philadelphia who can display their patriotism only by acts of self-denial. I suggest to these young people that they display their patriotism by cutting down their allowance of candy, chocolate sundaes, bon-bons, and the various luxuries manufactured almost entirely from sugar."

The new sugar rulings, according to Mr. Cooke, have been designed solely to give the housewife and the canner the opportunity to put up a large quantity of fruits this Summer.

"The fact is," said Mr. Cooke, "that the sugar situation is not at all encouraging, and I anticipate that some stringent rules may be promulgated after the canning season is over."

MAY BUILD BIG SHIPYARD.

Greenpoint Waterfront Property Is Sold for $950,000.

A big real estate transfer, said to be a preliminary to an important waterfront development in the Greenpoint district of Brooklyn, was recorded yesterday in the Register's office in that borough. The transaction was between the trustees of the estate of Lowell M. Palmer and the Greenpoint Improvement Company, a recently formed corporation. The estate has conveyed to the company holdings in Commercial, Dupont, and other streets, at the entrance to Newtown Creek. having an area of about 800,000 square feet. The property has a water frontage of more than 1,700 feet. No price was mentioned in the deed, but the war tax on the document indicated that the property was sold for $950,000.

There was a report yesterday afternoon that the new owners of the land planned to build a big shipyard there, involving an outlay of several million dollars. John K. Byard of 120 Broadway, Manhattan, an official of the Greenpoint Improvement Company, said last evening, however, that the corporation had not as yet formed definite plans for the development of the property. He would not say what character the improvement would probably take.

KNEWITZ APPOINTS AIDS.

Bronx Commissioner of Records Names James O'Brien as Deputy.

Commissioner of Records John Knewitz of Bronx County yesterday announced the appointment of James F. O'Brien of 3,106 Park Avenue Deputy Commissioner of Records for the Bronx at an annual salary of $3,000. He is a Democrat. James Brady of 1,356 University Avenue was appointed Chief Clerk, at $1,800 a year. He is an Independent Democrat, and was Deputy Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity in the Bronx under the Mitchel Administration.

Albert W. Rettinger, a real estate dealer living at Barnes Avenue and 200th Street, the Bronx, was appointed Superintendent of Records at $1,800 a year. He is a Republican. Henry Baker of 1,210 Franklin Avenue and Nicholas Curl of 174 East 205th Street were appointed clerks in the office of the Commissioner of Records.

Commissioner Knewitz pointed out that he made the appointments on the advice of the Attorney General and the Corporation Counsel.

Predicts Central Powers' Victory at Dinner to Austrian Ruler.

AMSTERDAM, May 22.—Sulton Mohammed of Turkey toasting Emperor Charles of Austria at a dinner given at the Imperial Palace on Monday is quoted in a Constantinople dispatch received here as saying:

"The treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest, which so happily put an end to the state of war between the Central Allies on the one hand and Russia and Rumania on the other, constitute an undeniable proof of our desire to terminate this murderous war."

It was remarked that the ladies of the imperial harem were present in a special waiting room when the Austrian Emperor and Empress arrived at the railroad station at the Turkish Capital on Sunday. This is an innovation in Turkish social life.

The Emperor and Empress were met at the station by the Sultan, the Turkish Ministers and diplomatic representatives of the Central Powers. They were formally received at a ceremony in the Yildiz Palace.

LEXINGTON FOR CONCERTS.

Syndicate of Buyers Announces Plans—4 Weeks of Chicago Opera.

The Lexington Opera House, recently sold under mortgage to a life insurance corporation by Oscar Hammerstein, is to be transferred to a syndicate of purchasers, under contracts signed yesterday, for use as an opera house and home of high-class concerts and recitals, such as are held in Carnegie and Aeolian Halls.

Lewis & Kelsey, attorneys of 120 Broadway, announced last night that a syndicate headed by George D. Grundy, who is part lessee of the Grand Central Palace, had contracted for the purchase of the Lexington, and would give Sunday night concerts there next Winter with star soloists.

The Chicago Opera Association announced that it had taken a lease of the Lexington for future seasons here, and would again give four weeks of grand opera, beginning Jan. 27, 1919, for which renewals would be received up to June 15 next, and new subscribers thereafter.

Hippodrome's Red Cross Benefit.

The Hippodrome's Red Cross performance will take place tonight, when, in addition to "Cheer Up," a dozen well-known performers will be on view. Governor Whitman will be present and will make an address after the second act. Raymond Hitchcock will be master of ceremonies, and those who will appear include Fred Stone, Doyle, and Dixon, Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, Leon Errol, Annette Kellermann, and Helen Stanley.

Although "Cheer Up" closed ten days ago, the entire company will return to the Hippodrome for tonight's performance.

Dolly Sisters in Midnight Revue.

Roszika and Yancsi Dolly, who have been absent from New York for a longer period than is their wont, returned to the city's theatrical life last night as members of the cast of the Midnight Revue in the Century Grove. They offered some half dozen dances and were enthusiastically greeted.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"A Pair of Petticoats" will end its run at the Bijou Theatre a week from Saturday. The piece will next be seen in Chicago.

The Festival Dancers will present "A Festival of Pentecost" at the Neighborhood Playhouse on Saturday and Sunday evenings in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Henry Street Settlement.

Chrystal and Julie Herne will be seen in vaudeville next season under the management of E. A. Weil in a one-act play by Harriet Ford, entitled "His God-Mother."

The vaudeville performances at the New Brighton Theatre on Friday of next week will be for the benefit of the Red Cross.

"David's Adventure," by A. E. Thomas, has been placed in rehearsal by Cohan and Harris, and will be given a preliminary production in Atlantic City on June 3. The piece is based upon a story by Leona Dalrymple, and the cast will include Donald Gallaher, David Higgins, Ben Johnson, Donald Meek, Madeline Delmar, Marion Coakley, Lucile La Verne, Frank Erbin, Frank Kilday, Joseph B. Miners, and Meyer Behrensen.

FARMERETTE PLAY BY BESSIE TYREE

Girls to the Farm, Boys to the Front, and Audience to the Red Cross.

Under inspiration from the Red Cross drive, Mrs. James S. Metcalfe became Bessie Tyree again last night, and for the rest of the week will appear at the French Theatre in Thirty-fifth Street in "Starting Something," of which she is author and stage manager. It is a "farmerette comedy" in three acts, and it shows how our city girls go back to the land in North Westchester, sending their boys to the front and incidentally inspiring adjacent parts with patriotic fervor.

Mrs. Metcalfe is a Westchester farmerette in her own right, and an employer of farmerettes. With perhaps a single exception, her facts and her local color are authentic. Among her heroines are a girl from a paper-box factory, a cabaret dancer, a hello girl, an unmarried mother, and a fat girl training down for the matrimonial handicap. All are married except the fat girl, and, with a rigor which permits no dodging, the happy swains are one and all sent off in khaki. The single unveracious detail is the costume of the farmerettes. Instead of the blue jeans and suspenders which prevail in North Westchester, Mrs. Metcalfe has arrayed her heroines in the trimmest of knickerbockers with skirted coats. What the play loses in grim, bucolic realism it gains in decorative quality. The farmerette colony in Bedford Village will please take note.

A large and able company contributed their services. Ethel Hornick was a philanthropist, Frank Andrews and Mrs. Jacques Martin were the farmer and his wife, Douglas Ross was a braw Scotch chauffeur, and Robert Midgley an inimitably funny tramp. Marion Berry and Clarice Berry were leading farmerettes, revealing a charm power of personality and a talent for acting quite out of the ordinary.

'SUICIDE' FOR KAISER'S NAVY

German Admiral Says Attacks on Transports Would Mean Just That.

LONDON, May 11, (Associated Press.)—"Suicide" is the word used by the German naval authorities to describe what it would mean for the Kaiser's navy to attempt to interfere with the transport of allied troops and munitions across the English Channel.

According to German papers, considerable irritation has been caused in Germany by the rapidity with which England has been throwing men into France, and criticism has been directed at the Admiralty. In a vigorous defense, Rear Admiral Karl Hollweg points out that the activity of the German Navy is subject to certain geographical limitations.

"A voluntary attempt to remove these limitations," he argues, "would signify a heroic but useless suicide for the German Fleet. The distance from German harbors is too great for the regular and frequent attacks which alone could cause continuous interruption of channel traffic. A small German Fleet cannot remain long in the channel, for submarines and mines would reap a rich harvest among it and, after being cut off, it would be compelled to accept battle with overwhelming British forces in unfavorable circumstances."

Even German submarines, according to their commanders, writes Captain von Kuhlwetter in the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, find that attacking transports is especially difficult in the channel.

Discussing U-boat warfare possibilities generally, he alludes to a suggestion made to post submarines off various allied harbor entrances. The idea, he says, "is impracticable," because "there are not enough submarines."

WARNS DRAFT ABSENTEES.

Crowder Says They Must Register Before June 5 if Necessary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Maj. Gen. Crowder, Provost Marshal General, who is working to meet the problem of registering young men included in the shifting population of the country on June 5, when those who have reached 21 years since June 5 last must register, issued a warning today that men of 21 who may be away from home on registration day must protect themselves by arranging for registration before that date in order that their local boards may have their cards on June 5.

"Any local board," said General Crowder, "is authorized to record the answers of persons absent from the jurisdiction of their local boards and to certify to their registration cards, upon application. Your card will be made out and turned over to you, and you must mail it to your home local board in time to reach it on Wednesday, June 5.

"If you do not know the designation and address of your home local board, address the card to the Mayor of your home town, in case your home is in a city of 30,000 population or over; or to the Clerk of your county, parish or similar unit, in case your home is not in a city of 30,000 population or over. The Mayor or County Clerk, as the case may be, will forward the card to your home local board.

"You must inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your registration card for the return of your registration certificate. Failure to get this certificate may cause you serious inconvenience. Any local board to which you apply will give you full information as to what to do."

General Crowder today wired the draft executives in all States that they must prepare to handle the registration of many absentees from home. His telegram in part reads:

"Your attention is again invited to the necessity of furnishing an adequate supply of registration cards to cities having a large nonresident or floating population. Shipbuilding plants, munition factories, and other industries connected with the prosecution of the war are responsible for a large influx of population at many places. States within whose borders such industries are located should make sure that sufficient cards are on hand to supply requests of absentees for same."

General Crowder has also wired the Governors of all States, except Florida, saying:

"If new county or counties have been erected in your State within past twelve months, necessitating creation of additional local boards, please immediately recommend personnel for appointment to such boards in ample time for approaching new registration. Please acknowledge this telegram by wire, stating whether necessity exists or not."

OUR RAILWAY NAPOLEON.

The President set a distinguished example when he confronted the country with an accomplished fact regarding the taking over of the railways by the nation. Director General MCADOO follows the precedent when he makes himself the chief operator, and makes his subordinates the successors of all the railway Presidents in the land. Nothing more ruthless was ever done by the biggest and worst of the trusts before their power was broken, but there is a difference. The old railway official who avowed his profane indifference to public opinion was thinking of his railways. The railways of the United States are not the property of the Director General, and he is not thinking of the convenience or profit of the railways primarily. He is thinking first and last of the public interests, and acts in the manner customary with those responsible for the conduct of a war.

Never is a question asked about the cost or profit or loss of any necessary act of war. That is why Government management is not suitable for normal conditions, but is peculiarly fit for meeting military imperatives. The only question to be asked respecting the wisdom and propriety of the unprecedented action of the Director General is, What will be the effect upon the efficiency of the railways in their military uses? Already there had appeared symptoms of a disposition to cling to old ways and to have independent opinions regarding what should be done by the railways in the public service. The merits of such differences of opinion are debatable only by those not in the line of duty, whether in high or low degree. Those highly placed have great responsibilities and cannot succeed if there is the least hesitation in obedience to orders. They alone have the right to think. Others in the line of duty should do what they are told, without consulting counsel or stockholders. Recourse to the courts to preserve either public or private interests in that manner is open to anybody except the officials under the Director General. From him to the humblest trackwalker or car cleaner there should be an unbroken line of authority and obedience. If the removal of the Presidents promotes that result in this war emergency, it is to be commended, whatever the effects upon the railways or however ruffling to the high railway officials' susceptibilities.

Those not in the line of duty to the Director General are less limited in their opinions than the Presidents of the railways. It is apparent that the plan is incomplete, and needs much working out of details. Perhaps it might have been better if there had been some delay to permit of a more complete plan and the announcement of the new officials. Now the roads are left headless for a time, and there is some danger of disorganization of operating forces. However, the Director General is as well aware of that as anybody, and there are passages in his announcement which reassure the working forces of the roads that they are secure in their positions as soon as they know who is their chief. That may apply even to the Presidents. They are useful in varying degrees, and presumably those wanted will receive the opportunity to serve their country rather than their companies. There is little difficulty about the matter of salaries. Some of the Presidents are indifferent to the pay; others will work more cheaply for the Government than for private employers; others, perhaps, may be paid both by the Government and the company when the matter of subordination is understood. It is a minor consideration at worst, for the Director General can have no difficulty in finding railway talent at one price or another.

However the matter is arranged, it challenges attention by the fact that it is in the line of evolution. It has long been proposed that the Government should have representatives upon the railway directorates to learn the inside of the business which it was regulating at a disadvantage. Now the situation is simply reversed. The railways need somebody to watch the inside of Government operation for the term of the lease. The Government is paying a rent sufficient for it to have control of the property without disturbance, but the property belongs to the lessor still, and there is an agreement for maintenance of the property in a manner which gives the owner the right to overlook what is done. The Presidents have a new function, quite enough to occupy them if they wish to work for those with whom they have had relations hitherto. There is not a little of unexplored territory in the railway field about which the public has had too little information. With the Director General on the inside and the Presidents in positions of observation, there will remain little hidden. The dual relation will be good for the railways in whatever future there is in store for them.

It must be clear that the more complete the reconstruction of railway operation, the more complete will be the destruction of the good-will of the various companies. Uncounted millions have been spent in making trade connections which now are scrapped. The railways had a value as going concerns which they no longer possess when they are made to go so differently. That going value cannot be restored to them, however excellent may be the physical maintenance of the properties. Other values, perhaps, may be created in the new relations. There are such opportunities for the increase of earnings with the same plant and labor that larger incomes should result from less outlay. The railways are sure of their earnings for the period of the lease, and they may be made more valuable by what they gain from Government operation, regardless of what they may lose from old methods which never can be restored. We are in a new railway era, not altogether master of our doings, and should be open-minded to possible benefits, rather than stubborn in old ideas, which, perhaps, may turn out to have been prejudices.

KEYSTONE REFORMERS.

Once a mortgage, always a mortgage. Once a reformer, always a reformer. When Senator BOIES PENROSE of Pennsylvania saw the beatific possibilities of the direct primary, he clasped it to his bosom. He loves it still, grins when he thinks of it. It has kept him in the Senate. Why shouldn't he be grateful? Entering upon his post-graduate reform studies, Mr. PENROSE saw another reform and loved it.

So did the VARES, fellow-reformers with him. Their candidate for Governor, State Senator SPROUL, Federal Prohibitionist, carried the Republican primaries Tuesday by a plurality of nearly 180,000 over J. DENNY O'NEIL, Highway Commissioner and Federal Prohibitionist. Thus one reform boosts another. The direct primary leads Mr. PENROSE toward ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment. Virtue begets virtue.

Bad news for the Wets, this notice of the Dryness of Pennsylvania primary Republicans, but who does not rejoice to see BOIES PENROSE—the VARES with him—on the prohibition wagon, rolling along the sunny streets of righteousness? What will his next reform be? Proportional representation or an anti-cigarette Federal amendment? Goodness is progressive.

BISMARCK ON ABSOLUTISM.

The fatal divergence of the present German Emperor from the policy of BISMARCK, the maker of the German Empire, is illustrated again by the impotence of the Reichstag, the Chancellor, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the control of foreign and internal policies by the military ring, the substitution of military absolutism for constitutional government, or such shadow of it as Germany has had.

Well known are BISMARCK'S opposition to unnecessary wars, his policy of friendship for Russia, his aversion to using the alliance with Austria-Hungary to further Austria's interests in the Balkans; his belief that the German Empire required no new wars, and that "its principal aim "must be to increase its internal "strength"; his insistence upon the value of good Anglo-German relations and his warning against competing with the English fleet, "against "fantastical plans which might cause "us to quarrel with people who are "important for our position in Eu-"rope"; against "daring and adven-"turous enterprises guided by the de-"sire to have a finger in every pie."

On account of his governing, without Parliament or budget, when Prime Minister of Prussia, his later exhortations against absolutism, his perception of the perilous megalomaniacal path on which the then young Emperor had entered, have not been so well remembered. In his speech at Jena in 1892 he said things now perfectly contemporaneous:

> It is a dangerous experiment nowadays to strive after absolutism in the centre of Europe. Henceforward we must aim at strengthening independent political conviction in Parliament and among the German people. * * * In building up the empire some kind of dictatorship was necessary, but that cannot be considered as a permanent feature. Our task can be completed only when Germany possesses a powerful Parliament which embodies our sense of unity.

Again, at Kissingen in the same year, he said that the responsibility of Ministers should be increased so as to strengthen the Reichstag. "If "Parliament becomes powerless, be-"comes a mere tool in the hands of "the Government, we return to the "régime of absolutism." Germany has returned to that régime. This creator, whose pictures, whose memoirs used to be in almost every German house, has been extruded from the German mind by the brood of destroyers who have reversed his policies and forgotten his warnings. His foresight has been vindicated often and strikingly since he was dismissed from office in 1890, most strikingly since his death. What a deadly criticism of German policy under WILHELM II. BISMARCK set down in his memoirs:

> We ought to do all we can to weaken the bad feeling which has been called forth through our growth to the position of a real great Power by the honorable and peaceful use of our influence.

THE KAISER'S PATENT BOSWELL.

KARL ROSNER, the Kaiser's official Boswell, has finished his job; or, as a somewhat clumsy translation of his valedictory published in The World puts it, "My command is at an end." The Kaiser has observed that books without end are crammed with anecdotes of NAPOLEON, his sayings and doings; every man who got within hearing distance of that extraordinary man had some characteristic act or utterance to report. It occurred to him that the second and greater NAPOLEON must not go unreported. He must say and do some characteristic things, and they must be Boswelled. Therefore he did something that would never have occurred to the original NAPOLEON; he set about doing these characteristic things and he appointed an official Boswell. This Boswell was KARL ROSNER, correspondent of the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger.

Mr. ROSNER has accompanied or followed the Kaiser throughout the western offensive, Boswelling away at stated and measured times. When it was time for the Kaiser to do something characteristic, the signal was given for Mr. ROSNER to advance and begin Boswelling. Of course Mr. ROSNER was somewhat handicapped by the fact that the Kaiser did not do any fighting. The men who were around NAPOLEON had no such trouble. "What are you dodging for? If that "ball had been meant for you, it "would have found you if you had "been fifty feet underground." "Ah, "I am hit. It must have been a "Tyrolese sharpshooter who got me "at such a distance. Those fellows "are wonderful shots." That was NAPOLEON. He really didn't need any machine-made Boswell; anybody who came in his company became a Boswell because he couldn't help it.

What, however, is a made-to-order Boswell to do in the case of such a very different Napoleon? Mr. ROSNER did the best he could. Notified that the Kaiser is to say something pathetic and historic at 1:30 P. M. on a hillock near Queant, to the west of Cambrai, Mr. ROSNER repairs thither. He finds the Kaiser in the correct attitude, looking mournfully down upon the battlefield, his staff disposed properly, some at L., some at R., some at L. U. E., one alongside him—necessarily, for the Kaiser cannot utter the historic and pathetic saying unless he has somebody to utter it to. As soon as Mr. ROSNER has arrived the Kaiser turns to the officer who is serving, if we may so phrase it, as Mr. Hennessy to his Mr. Dooley, and says, "What "have I not done to preserve the "world from these horrors?" Mr. ROSNER duly notes it, retires at the proper signal, and the characteristic utterance is properly Boswelled to the world.

At another time the Kaiser decides on picking a violet, and Mr. ROSNER is sent for to record this beautiful incident. Really, it is the best of all, because original. NAPOLEON never thought of picking a violet; neither did HANNIBAL or CAESAR or ALEXANDER. Even if one of them had, it would never have occurred to him to have a Rosner on hand for purposes of Boswellization. This was a stroke of genius, but in the main the "turns" the Kaiser performed for Mr. ROSNER seem lacking in imagination. Maybe that is why NAPOLEON'S characteristic performances seem so different. When the disastrous attack on Mount Kemmel began, the Kaiser was on hand—not in the battle, of course, but where he could see it. He began this arduous labor at 9 A. M., so Mr. ROSNER told us, and kept it up heroically until "late in the afternoon." During this majestic scene he was surrounded entirely by Generals, and was "marking the results on the maps" as the fighting went on. This was the best the Kaiser and Mr. ROSNER could do with the battle of Kemmel.

This matter of the maps is suggestive. In the movies a General or a King is always identified by his earnest, constant, and excited examination of maps, just as a thug is identified by his cap and a priest by his clerical garb. When the movie devotee sees a man in a uniform pawing a map he knows he is looking upon either a great General or a mighty monarch. For further identification, a number of supers in uniform are always represented as standing around in awestruck attitudes, just as the Kaiser at the battle of Kemmel had himself surrounded by Generals for Mr. ROSNER to see and note. We cannot resist the suspicion that Mr. ROSNER was not the only official recorder of these impressive scenes; that, in fact, there was a movie operator along who is not mentioned, and that Berlin will get the results pictorially as well as Boswellically.

And now "my command is at an end"; Mr. ROSNER can go back to commonplace war reporting again. Before dismissing him, the Kaiser gave him one more Napoleonic scene—HINDENBURG "awaiting his highest war "lord on the front steps of a little "red house;" the Kaiser arriving, the production of the inevitable maps; "they stand before maps;" "the "Kaiser, HINDENBURG, and LUDEN-"DORFF stand before other maps;" "once again new maps lie before the Kaiser." Any movie devotee would recognize this scene in an instant. The Kaiser gives him a last message, as poverty-stricken in imagination as all the rest. "I stand on the platform," finishes ROSNER. "The Kaiser is still "talking out of the window as the "train pulls out."

We would not hurt the Kaiser's feelings, but we are bound to tell him that he is not the least bit like NAPOLEON.

NEW YORK MUST GO OVER THE TOP, TOO.

To Germany the work of the Red Cross on the battlefields of France and among the victims of "frightfulness" is the propaganda of humanity, and the Red Cross is, therefore, a formidable antagonist, always to be reckoned with as a factor that may be decisive. Of what avail is it to destroy the homes of noncombatants by sword and fire and to lay a country waste, with the design of ruining, starving, and demoralizing a people, if the Red Cross comes to their rescue, feeds them, nurses them, finds them shelter, clothes them, restores their courage, and fills their souls with the will to achieve victory?

What the Germans think of the "second line of defense," as the indefatigable Red Cross has been so aptly called, they show by shelling and bombing its hospitals and firing upon its ambulances. This has been of such common occurrence, so many cases have been proved, that the enemy's intentions are now well understood and guarded against.

The Germans cannot conceive of the activities of the Red Cross on the side of the Allies, backed so lavishly with money and organized so thoroughly, except in the light of propaganda. The humanity, the idealism of the Red Cross campaign they are blind to, or think it a sham to hide a subtle political motive, a strategical plan. It is the success of the Red Cross in healing the soul hurts of stricken communities, in raising up a despairful people to face the horrors of war with resolution, that worries the Germans. And especially they hold in aversion the American Red Cross, because the great resources of the United States are behind it for sanitary, constructive, and restorative work, which renders futile the barbarous tactics of "frightfulness."

Make no mistake, the German war lords fear the Red Cross campaign of humanity, although they call it by another name, as much as they do an American army corps. It will be bad news for them when they hear that the American people have gone "over the top" in contributing to the Red Cross War Fund. New York cannot afford to have it said that other communities have exceeded their quotas and she has failed, for New York in patriotic giving has always been bountiful. Michigan, South Dakota, and Delaware, also many cities, have gone "over the top." New York should be good for several millions more than the $25,000,000 asked for. Give till it hurts. It will hurt the Germans ever so much more.

A POOR MONTH FOR THE U-BOATS.

On the eve of the submarine campaign to sink all ships without notice, that is to say late in January, 1917, the German Admiralty boasted that 1,000,000 tons would be destroyed a month, and calculated the end of the British mercantile marine almost to a day, also the end of the British Empire. The Germans had some good months, but the average they aimed at was never attained. During the Winter of 1917-1918 they destroyed about 400,000 tons of British and neutral shipping each month. The shadow of failure had fallen over their abhorrent enterprise. With the publication of sinkings for April by the British Government it is no longer possible even for a German official with a gift for self-deception to believe that the war can ever be won by the U-boats.

During April 220,709 tons of British and 84,393 tons of neutral and allied shipping were sunk, altogether 305,102 tons. The portentous decline may be due in large measure to the unceasing activity of the Anglo-American and French patrols, to which vessels are constantly being added. The convoy system has also been successful in baffling the U-boats, and more attacks by them on armed cargo carriers have proved unsuccessful. No doubt the closing of the Ostend and Zeebrugge channels, whether a complete job or not, has had its effect upon the score. The War Insurance Bureau has cut its rates almost in two, a sign that the submarines are no longer considered a very serious menace to shipping.

The other day the mining of a large area between Germany and Scotland, to restrict the operations of the German flotillas, was reported. The nights are now so short that their most favorable working hours are limited. It is quite likely that May will show a still further and significant decline in sinkings.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Starvation Leads to Cannibalism. Often have there come before now, from the Central Empires, reports indicating that their civilian populations were on the very verge of starvation, and as often has there failed to follow the insistent and effectual demand for peace, even if it were not "German peace," to be expected as a result of such conditions. So like statements now are all open to suspicion. It may be, however, that yesterday's special dispatch in THE TIMES did not exaggerate either the reality or the extent of the suffering prevalent in Austria. The accuracy of this account was emphatically guaranteed by the correspondent who sent it from the Franco-Swiss frontier, and its credibility is increased by the fact that its details were in substance exactly in consonance with the trend of evidence given by many previous witnesses.

It has long been known that the food situation in Austria was worse than in Germany, and there is no intrinsic improbability that, as was stated, some of the people in Austria have already been brought to cannibalism—a point always reached when famine has reduced men to the state of desperate animals. The dispatch said that the victims were prisoners of war employed in the gas works, apparently, of Vienna, but it referred to those who murdered them only as "fellow-workmen." That might have meant either that the killing was done by other war prisoners or that it was the work of their Austrian associates.

If the former interpretation is the true one, the revelation is not politically important, as it only shows that the Austrians are letting their prisoners of war starve to death, as was done long since by the Germans; but if the resort to this ghastly means of sustaining life was by Austrian workmen, the episode has a larger significance, and, coming from any other country than one of the two where the people as a whole are practically without a voice in the determination of national policies, it would justify a confident prophecy of immediate revolt against the military class. But Austria and Germany are not to be judged by the rules that apply to the rest of mankind, and the limit of their endurance is unknown.

Letters to Soldiers Criticised. Again it is necessary to remind the relatives in this country of soldiers in France that in writing to them those relatives should keep constantly in mind the necessity for winning the war, and that the coming of peace, earnestly as it is to be desired, is not a proper or even decent subject of present discussion or prophecy. One of THE TIMES correspondents on the western front complained yesterday, and with good reason, that the men in far too many instances are getting letters the writers of which express the belief that the end of the war is close at hand—that it will be over within the present year. For that belief, of course, there is in this country no basis whatever except the wish. Not only is it without any foundation of knowledge, but it is contradicted by all the available information and by the leaders of all the allied armies—the only men who have a right to speak with authority.

Worse than that, the wish for immediate peace is not shared by the men in the field; it is entertained only by people here at home who either put their personal anxieties above all other considerations or else lack the intelligence to see that peace this year would be more than likely to be—would almost necessarily be—a "negotiated peace" of the horrible sort that has been established in Russia and in Rumania.

The American soldiers who are risking their lives in France have no desire to be relieved from hardship and danger at that dreadful price. They are ready and eager to fight on until there is gained the victory which alone could justify the enormous sacrifices of life and treasure already made by the nations allied against Germany. Nevertheless, they are disheartened and their morale is deteriorated when they get from home letters indicating the lack here of their own appreciation of the fact that the object of the world's desire is not peace, but a restoration for all time of the conditions that made life tolerable to free men and women.

Every parent or other relative of a soldier who cannot be forgetful enough of self to refrain from writing such expectations or aspirations as are shown by forecasts of speedy peace simply gives excuse for not improving the war mail service—almost gives excuse for cutting it off altogether.

One Victory Is Quite Inconclusive. ORVILLE WRIGHT, who knows a thing or two about airplanes, admits the possibility of giving them some degree of protection against machine-gun fire by covering them with steel plates. He insists, however, that in doing this the Germans have produced a machine of such narrowly limited utility as to be inferior to the unarmored planes.

The accuracy of this judgment is easily credible, in spite of the fact that Major LUFBERY seems to have lost his life, in spite of his skill, while battling with an aerial "tank." A single conflict with an armored airplane proves little or nothing as to the merit of the innovation. Before now, and not infrequently, German aviators not thus guarded have been victorious against aviators even of his ability, and it may be that in this case, also, the result would have been the same—that the American "ace" would have fallen and his enemy have escaped his fire—even if the fight had been on even terms as regards protection.

To make an airplane slow and clumsy for the sake of a problematical safety for its operators would evidently be a bad bargain. As an experiment, it was interesting, but it would appeal to few other than German minds, and it is not to be forgotten that, according to present accounts, the machine against which Major LUFBERY contended with such lamentable results was wrecked a few hours or minutes later by men in just such machines as his.

A FOOTNOTE TO LICHNOWSKY.

The Ambassador's Statement to Admiral Hood Confirms the Charges of His Famous Memorandum.

By WILLIAM ROSCOE THAYER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The following authentic statement is of interest because it confirms from a different angle Prince Lichnowsky's recently published revelations. It also is one more of the hundred pieces of testimony which prove that the German Kaiser was meditating war in the Spring of 1914.

When diplomatic relations were broken off between England and Germany, the English sent the German Ambassador, Prince Lichnowsky, home with full honors, unlike the boorish treatment which the Kaiser gave the French Ambassador, M. Cambon. The battleship on which the Prince went back was commanded by Admiral Hood, who was on very friendly relations with Lichnowsky. For the latter, being a Slav, had good manners, which the Prussians have never been able to attain, and had been really popular in London society.

During the crossing the Prince was much dejected, and he said in substance to Admiral Hood:

"I might as well jump overboard, for my career is ended. Three months ago [that is about May 1] his Majesty the Emperor wrote and instructed me to investigate secretly the state of English public opinion and to let him know whether there was any likelihood that the English would enter the war in case we made war. I looked over the ground in all directions and replied that the English were not likely to go to war on any account. In the first place, they had ceased to be a martial nation. They had grown so rich that their chief desire was to enjoy the luxury and comfort which their wealth brought them. Next, they had a civil war on their hands in Ireland. Then, they had only a very small army ready—160,000 men—and it would take them at least a year to train any considerable force. Finally, I added, they had grown so unmilitary that they allowed even women [suffragettes] to intimidate them.

"I have no doubt," said Lichnowsky, "that my report must have influenced the decision of the Emperor in forcing the war. So you see what my fate is likely to be."

On his return to London immediately after, Admiral Hood repeated Prince Lichnowsky's statement to several persons and, among others, to a Harvard professor of worldwide reputation, who repeated it to me soon after he came back to Boston. Admiral Hood, I need hardly remind you, married a well-known Boston lady and had himself many friends and acquaintances, including the Harvard professor, in Boston society. I printed the story in my 'Germany versus Civilization' more than two years ago, but I did not give Admiral Hood as its source because he was then in active service in the British Navy. He went down with his ship, as every one knows, in the battle of Jutland, and there can be no impropriety in naming him now.

In the light of such evidence, how long will even the German people go on believing the lie which the Kaiser passed off on them at the beginning of the war when he assured them that the sword had been forced into his hands?

'DRY' VOTES FUTILE WOMEN ARE WARNED

SUFFRAGISTS ARE TEACHING

They Have Established 60 Centres in City for Political Instruction of Women.

All days that remain before the newly enfranchised women have their opportunity on Saturday to enroll with the different parties and thus qualify for participation in the primary elections next September will be political school days with the leaders of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, of which Miss Mary Garrett Hay is the official head. They are giving impartial instruction to the women voters in what the different parties stand for in the matter of principles and public service.

Sixty centres for the dissemination of such information have been established during the last few days by the Woman Suffrage Party in this city, a majority of them in the Borough of Manhattan and principally with a view to reaching prospective women voters of alien birth, who are most in need of such reaching. This work is under the direction of the Americanization Committee of the Woman Suffrage Party, of which Miss Mary Dreier is Chairman. The centres of information have been established in settlements and neighborhood houses which abound in the densely populated sections of the city, where foreign-born voters are in a majority; also in public libraries, public schools, churches, and women's clubs. To meet the increased pressure of work during the remaining days many auxiliary centres have been established in private homes in such sections.

To reach the women voters of foreign birth the Woman Suffrage Party has had printed and distributed 42,000 hand bills in foreign languages, informing women of the opportunity to make themselves felt that Saturday's enrollment affords, and urging that they will not do their full duty as citizens and voters unless they qualify for the right to participate in the primaries, where party candidates are nominated. Suffrage workers at the headquarters of the organization, 3 East Thirty-eighth Street, said yesterday that the interest displayed by the women voters of alien birth was most vivid and the response their efforts among them has evoked most hearty.

In addition to the work done by the information centres, thirteen large rallies have been held under the auspices of the Woman Suffrage Party during the present month for the purpose of arousing interest in the enrollment among the foreign-born women. In many of the settlement houses, too, so-called "first voters' parties" have been given, at which the women have appeared in the finery of many lands, and, after listening to music and partaking of refreshments, have been treated to a lecture in civics and received instruction in how to enroll.

While much of the work done by the Woman Suffrage Party has been among the foreign-born women, their American sisters are not being neglected. The Woman Voters' Council, another agency of the Woman Suffrage Party, is the medium through which the work among the latter is being done. It was said at the headquarters of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party yesterday that 125,000 women have availed themselves of the brief courses of instructions in government and civics conducted by the Woman Voters' Council since January. In practically all the big department stores and in other establishments, where women are employed in large numbers, special classes are being conducted every week with the co-operation of the employers. A full citizenship course includes four lessons in which are embodied the fundamentals of political organization and elections; 160,000 pamphlets containing these lessons in printed form have been distributed among women who will be qualified to enroll next Saturday.

As the ratification of the Federal Prohibition amendment is to be an issue in at least the Republican primaries, the New York Anti-Saloon League has sent out a warning to women who favor national prohibition not to become identified with the Prohibition Party, alluring though its title may be.

"If you live in New York City and want to help Prohibition enroll with the Republican Party," the appeal from the Anti-Saloon League reads in part. "A Democratic candidate next Fall in New York City means a Tammany Democrat. Tammany is bitterly opposed to prohibition. A Prohibition Party candidate can not be elected—such dry votes are lost. To make sure of having dry candidates in the Republican Party, enough 'dry' voters must enroll in it to outvote the 'wets.' If that is done the dry candidates will get the nomination of the party."

WON'T DISCUSS PROHIBITION

Long Island Episcopalians Refuse to Take Up the Subject.

A discussion of the prohibition question so far as the State is concerned was averted at yesterday's convention of the Long Island Episcopal Diocese at the Garden City Cathedral, when the convention, by a vote of 88 to 55, voted to table a resolution calling up the matter for argument. The resolution, introduced by the Rev. Charles E. Cragg of Huntington, was for the purpose of ratifying the amendment to the United States Constitution.

"I oppose any action, as we have no legal right to discuss the question at this convention. It is purely a political question," declared Colonel William S. Cogswell of Jamaica. He was supported by Charles H. Fuller of Brooklyn.

"As Governor Whitman favors Statewide prohibition," said Milton Le Cluse, a real estate operator of Huntington, "it would take a very strong candidate to oppose him." He was declared out of order by Bishop Burgess, presiding, who said political discussions were barred.

By a vote of 84 to 51 the convention went on record as favoring a plan to permit women to vote at the primaries if the vestries sanction it. The convention also passed a resolution expressing approval of the country's attitude regarding the war.

ROOSEVELT BACK IN CLUB.

Republicans Rehang Colonel's Picture and Invite Him to Return.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is again a member of the Republican Club. In 1912, when the Colonel's Bull Moose Party bolted the Republican organization and sought to bring about the defeat of William Howard Taft for reelection as President, the relations between the Colonel and the prominent leaders of the Republican Party were more than strained. They broke in many directions, not the least important fracture being in the famous club in West Fortieth Street founded by the leaders of the party of Abraham Lincoln. The Colonel was bitterly denounced in the club, and an oil painting of him which occupied a place of honor along with paintings of Mr. Taft, Elihu Root, and other idols of the Republican faith, was summarily relegated to the cellar.

Some time ago the Roosevelt painting was dusted off and rehung in the assembly room, the circumstance presaging the fact that the Colonel was about to be welcomed back into the fold. About two weeks ago some member of the club suggested that the year 1912 was a long way back in history, and that it might be a nice thing to invite the sage of Oyster Bay to take his old place in the councils of the club. The suggestion met with favor, and the Colonel was sounded on the proposal. "Delighted," was the Colonel's answer. When this decision was carried back to the club officials the Executive Committee met and unanimously voted to reinstate the Colonel as a member. The Colonel expressed his appreciation in the following letter to Secretary William S. Denison:

> Office of Theodore Roosevelt,
> My Dear Mr. Denison: I am very much pleased, indeed, at the action of the Executive Committee. I accept with the utmost pleasure, and I shall be around at the club very soon.
>
> With hearty thanks and all good wishes to my fellow-members, faithfully yours,
> THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

It was emphatically denied that William Barnes had resigned from the club. He is still a member, and it was predicted that the efforts of the dove of peace may yet bring about a reconciliation between the Colonel and his long time enemy, the Albany leader.

MAKE CITIZENS OF SOLDIERS

Camp Upton Aliens to the Number of 330 Take Oath of Allegiance.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., May 22.—It took less than a half hour here today to grant citizenship to 330 soldiers of the National Army, aliens and enemy aliens, who had been subjects of more than thirty different countries. Justice Joseph Morschauser, sitting at Special Term of the Supreme Court, administered the oath of allegiance to the men whose applications for citizenship were accepted, and their papers were furnished them by James F. Richardson, County Clerk of Suffolk County.

Altogether there were naturalized 13 Austrians, 4 Germans, 2 Mexicans, 1 Montenegrin, 1 Portuguese, 24 Turks, including Armenians and Syrians, 2 Belgians and 1 Bulgarian, 6 Danes, 73 British, of whom 25 were negro infantrymen of the 367th Regiment; 8 Greeks, 84 Italians, 7 Dutch, 3 Serbians, 7 Norwegians, 2 Rumanians, 75 Russians, including Poles; 3 Spaniards, and 11 Swedes. There were no French applicants. The Germans were heartily applauded.

Each applicant presented a statement from his company commander attesting his loyalty and was required to have two witnesses. Not one of the applicants had ever before tried to obtain citizenship. The court will sit again tomorrow.

General Bell in an address told the applicants that if they did not want to fight or felt any lingering feeling for their mother countries they should not take the oath. "You can't be loyal," said the General, "unless you can wholeheartedly support the Government of the United States."

Orange Bars Unpatriotic Papers.

ORANGE, N. J., May 22.—Without qualification the West Orange Town Council passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the wish of this council that all news dealers of West Orange refrain from selling or offering for sale unpatriotic or seditious publications. We also call upon all good citizens to refrain from buying the same, and also ask the co-operation of the National Defense League."

TREASON IN LUXURY, SCHURMAN ASSERTS

WOULD BAR PLEASURE CARS

All Physically Fit Men and Women Should Be Freed from Non-Essential Industries, He Says.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 22.—The spendthrift of today is a traitor, the good citizen the man who stints and saves; non-essential industries should be closed down; physically fit men and women should be released from non-essential service and sent into war industries; costly entertainment should cease and civilians should be prohibited from purchasing gasoline for the "luxury" of motoring, said Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell, in his address at the fiftieth annual commencement of the university here today.

It is only by following these tenets that America will win the war, President Schurman said. The war has shown the necessity for athletic and military training for young men and women and they should be put in force after the war, he said. He predicted also that the exraordinary development of science during the war would bring a new era for scholars and scientists in the years to come.

If America screws her courage to the "sticking point" she shall not fail, he said, for behind her "are the men and material resources of all the democracies of the world; with her the inspiring consciousness of a just and righteous cause. It took the American people a long time to find their soul in this war; having found it they will keep it however long the struggle and however great the sacrifices."

In emphasizing the demand for saving and self-denial by the American people, President Schurman said that the reason for this was not that abstention was desirable in itself, but that it was necessary for the efficient supply of our army and navy, and the armies and navies of our allies.

"The nation cannot spare either commodities or services for the mere enjoyment of stay-at-homes," he said. "The time has arrived when the non-essential industries should be closed down just as soon as they can be transformed, or their capital and labor transferred to essential industries. The time has arrived when all physically fit men should be released from non-essential service and sent into war industries; the number of women in domestic service should be greatly reduced, and those who can be spared sent into the war industries; men and women who have not worked should begin to work—with their hands or brains or both.

"The time has arrived when costly entertainments should cease, when gasolene, which is needed for military operations, should in general be denied to civilians for mere luxury motoring. The time has arrived when every man and woman who spend on themselves more than is absolutely necessary should be tabooed as robbers of the public treasury. The spendthrift of today is a traitor. The good citizen is the man who stints and saves. And let him invest what he saves in Government bonds to provide the means for carrying on the war."

Leading up to the assertion that the United States has done all within its power since the beginning of hostilities to harness science and education to its war needs, President Schurman said:

"Germany has the advantage over all her opponents, especially over Great Britain and the United States, in the solid fabric of science she has constructed during the last generation by means of generous Government encouragement of and appropriations for scientific research and instruction. Our Government today, instructed by the war, is ready to spend billions of dollars for new scientific truths in which prior to the war it felt no concern and for which it would make no provisions."

GIRLS VICTIMS OF POMP.

Made Ill by Singing in Cold for Bavarian Royalty.

AMSTERDAM, May 11, (Associated Press.)—Bavarian high school girls, forced by an official order issued "at his Majesty's personal request," have paid tragic tribute to German court pomp, according to the Munich Post.

The occasion was the royal golden wedding celebration, and the school girls were made to assemble, attired in thin white dresses and dilapidated shoes, despite bitter cold and an icy pavement, in front of the royal palace and sing patriotic songs for an hour.

"Two of the girls," the Munich paper relates, "half-starved as they were, have succumbed to consumption. Four others were taken seriously ill, and one is undergoing treatment in the municipal hospital.

"We have no hesitation in declaring that the whole affair is a disgrace at a time like the present, when old and young alike are in an enfeebled condition owing to the lack of sufficient food."

GOLD BASIS FOR SPAIN.

Government Presents a Bill Which, if Passed, Will Have That Effect.

MADRID, May 22.—The Finance Ministry has presented a bill in Parliament the effect of the passage of which would be to place Spain on a gold basis. It provides that silver shall not be legal tender in amounts of more than 50 pesetas, except for payments to the Government. Until facilities have been provided for minting the required amount of gold, foreign gold coins will have currency in Spain, their value in pesetas being stamped on them.

The bill provides that paper currency of the denomination of 25 pesetas shall be withdrawn from circulation after Jan. 1 next. The Government will be authorized to redeem exterior loans, wholly or in part, issuing an internal loan, if necessary, to obtain funds for the operation.

CLAIMS 3,575,000 CAPTIVES.

Germany Boasts of Value of "Our Growing Labor Army."

AMSTERDAM, May 11, (Associated Press.)—"Our growing labor army" is the description applied by the German newspapers to tehir prisoners of war. In an official statement the German people is notified that Germany and her allied States now hold 3,575,000 prisoners.

The statement lays stress on the "supreme value" of these prisoners as man-power for industry and agriculture. They will go far, it is said, to compensate Germany for the men she has had to withdraw from peaceful pursuits for active military service.

"The longer the war lasts the more adaptable and useful these prisoners become," says the official statement.

Borglum Defends His Sculpture.

COLD SPRING, N. Y., May 22.—Gutzon Borglum was a witness in the Surrogate's Court here today in the case of the Gorham Manufacturing Company against the executors of the estate of Mrs. Julia Butterfield, the suit involving payment for a statue of General Butterfield. Mr. Borglum modeled the statue and the executors hold that it is not a good likeness of the hero of Gettysburg. The sculptor defended his work.

MRS. STOKES DENIES DISLOYAL INTENT

CASE READY FOR JURY

Federal Prosecutor in Argument Insists Her Purpose Was to Spread Sedition.

KANSAS CITY, May 22.—Presentation of testimony in the case of Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, who is on trial in the Federal Court here charged with violation of the Espionage act, was completed this afternoon and argument begun. Final summing up by both sides will take place tomorrow, after which Judge Arba S. Van Valkenburgh will charge the jury. Court officials expect the case to go to the jury about noon.

Elmer B. Silvers, Assistant United States District Attorney, spoke for the Government this afternoon and Seymour Stedman of Chicago for the defense. Mr. Silvers said that the question at issue was the intent or motive behind the signed communication of Mrs. Stokes which appeared in The Kansas City Star and in which she expressed opposition to the Government. He pictured the defendant as having sought every opportunity to spread disloyal propaganda.

Mr. Silvers referred to the address of Mrs. Stokes at Kansas City, which he said, "stirred up a hornet's nest." He declared she saw further opportunity to spread disloyalty in an interview which a reporter "toned down." Enraged, he said, when she saw her seditious declarations misquoted, she dictated and sent the signed letter of correction on which the indictment was based.

In replying Mr. Stedman asserted the freedom of speech and the length to which a citizen might go in criticising the Government in war time were the principal issues involved. He declared Mrs. Stokes's chief concern was that the war might not accomplish the purposes for which America entered it. He argued that the Government must prove motive on each count of the indictment and that Mrs. Stokes had wilfully sought to create mutiny and insubordination. Expression of opposition to the Government, he said, was directed against those in power in the Government, and was, moreover, an expression of opinion rather than fact, based on Mrs. Stokes's reading of statistics indicating that vast profits were being made out of war industries. Whether these figures were correct did not matter, he said.

On taking the stand this morning in continuation of her direct examination, Mrs. Stokes testified that her husband was a member of the Ninth Coast Guard Artillery. She denied that in her communication to The Star she had intended to cause insubordination or obstruct recruiting.

Mrs. Stokes declared the letter written to The Star was dictated in such haste that her exact meaning was not expressed. She explained that she was preparing to leave the city on her speaking tour at the time the letter was written.

"I was in such a hurry," she testified, "that I never even read the copy before sending it to the newspaper. You know I didn't expect The Star to print the letter, as they had repressed a previous interview."

"Do you believe in patriotism in the ordinary sense of love for the country of which you are a citizen?" asked Mr. Silvers.

"I believe in country as exemplified in its people and not by those in control. I love all countries," was the reply.

She admitted selling the transcript of her speech made in Minneapolis to an Eastern magazine in which she had said: "This is a historic event in my life. It is the first time I have ever stood on any platform as an American."

Mr. Silvers quoted from the article statements to the effect that she had refused to rise to the national anthem or salute the flag, and had stated she would rather be shot than do so.

Dr. Eva Harding of Topeka, former candidate for Congress, testified today that she had attended the luncheon given by the Women's Dining Club at which Mrs. Stokes spoke.

Mrs. Stokes, the witness testified, spoke of the "invisible government" which the people "would have to fight after the war." Dr. Harding quoted the defendant as saying there were two elements in this country—the people and the profiteers—and that at the conclusion of the world war would come the crisis.

The people would not fight for dollars, Dr. Harding testified Mrs. Stokes had declared, and therefore the phrase "make the world safe for democracy" had been adopted.

On cross-examination Dr. Harding admitted she had been arrested, tried, and acquitted on a charge of obstructing the draft, but that she had no clear idea of why she had been arrested.

LA FOLLETTE COUNSEL CRITICISES PRESS

St. Paul Speech Was Patriotic, Roe Says, and Senator Was Misquoted.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Counsel for Senator La Follette closed today the argument begun yesterday before the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee in support of a motion to dismiss charges that statements by the Wisconsin Senator in a speech at St. Paul last September were disloyal and seditious. Gilbert M. Roe of New York, the Senator's attorney, concluded with the declaration that Senator La Follette was not disloyal and that to say that in his heart he desired to see the German cause succeed was unthinkable. Two weeks were given to the attorney to file a supplementary brief.

The attorney read from the text of the speech, as submitted by him to the committee, to show that Senator La Follette said that in entering the war this country had "cause for complaint" and "serious grievances" against Germany. He declared if there were any inaccurate statements they were made in good faith by the Senator and with no intention "to put the Administraion in a hole."

Mr. Roe declared that the St. Paul speech was highly patriotic and that the charges followed attacks which had been concentrated on the Wisconsin Senator by a "war party" and a "war-mad press." He denied that Senator La Follette said that the carrying of American citizens on a munition-loaded ship was "the only thing that carried us into the war." He said The Chicago Tribune on Sept. 21 last quoted Senator La Follette as saying: "I was not in favor of beginning this war. We had no grievance." Similar statements also appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES and The Washington Post, he said.

"Every Associated Press dispatch carried it that way," Mr. Roe said, adding that all Associated Press newspapers "got that story and printed it that way."

When Senator Walsh of Montana questioned Mr. Roe regarding Senator La Follette's reference to war profiteers, Senator Vardaman of Mississippi interrupted to say if the committee would read the evidence in the Hog Island investigation by a Senate committee "they would find fraud that stinks to Heaven."

Senator Reed of Missouri urged the committee to confine its investigation to the text of the speech. He added that if anybody could show that Senator La Follette was trying to defeat this country in war, instead of merely criticising some member of the Administration, he would be willing to vote to expel him from the Senate.

CONFER ON REVENUE TODAY.

Wilson to Meet Congressional Leaders and Discuss Matter.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Whether revenue legislation shall be undertaken at this session of Congress depends on President Wilson's decision after a conference tomorrow with Congressional leaders, who are strongly in favor of postponing the legislation until next December.

Today the President went over the arguments presented by Secretary McAdoo for enactment of a new tax law before adjournment and he will see Mr. McAdoo again before finally determining whether the Administration shall declare the legislation necessary to preservation of the nation's finances in healthy condition for the war.

All the advice which Secretary McAdoo got today from his advisers having direct charge of administering the revenue law and of planning to meet future financial needs of the Government was that a new measure must be enacted by Fall.

Regardless of Government needs, Secretary McAdoo is represented as believing that the business interests of the nation should know long before February or March the nature and amount of taxes to be assessed on them for this year's business. Members of the Senate and House, however, still are hostile to the enactment of tax legislation on the eve of election.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon B. Chittenden to Celebrate Event Today.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Baldwin Chittenden of 121 Madison Avenue will celebrate their golden wedding this afternoon at their residence. On account of the war there will be only a small reception, members of the family and a few friends. Following the reception there will be a family dinner. Assisting in receiving will be two daughters, Mrs. A. F. Holly and Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, the latter the well-known anti-suffrage leader, who is now engaged in Red Cross work out of the city.

Mrs. James L. Morgan of Brooklyn, a sister, who celebrated her own golden wedding two years ago, will also assist in receiving. Other members of the family who will be present will be Simeon Baldwin Chittenden, Jr., of Cleveland, Ohio, with his wife and children, and another daughter, Mrs. Charles M. Thayer, from Worcester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Chittenden have spent all of their long married life within the limits of New York. Mr. Chittenden is descended from one of the men who helped to build up Brooklyn, the first Simeon Baldwin Chittenden, a leading merchant, Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce and member of Congress.

Celebrate Corporal Roth's Birthday.

Although Corporal Jesse Roth is in France with the American Expeditionary Forces his twenty-second birthday was celebrated yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Leopold Roth of 636 West 172d Street, who invited the young soldier's friends and twenty children from the Hebrew Orphan Asylum. The children during the afternoon offered a prayer for President Wilson and the soldiers and sailors.

GERMANS COERCING DUTCH

Prohibition of Sailings Due to Berlin Pressure for Economic Agreement, Rotterdam Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—A supplementary note from the Netherlands Government was delivered to the State Department today by the Netherlands Legation, making response to this Government's reply to Holland's original protest against the recent seizure by the United States Government of the Dutch merchant shipping in American ports.

Secretary Lansing had not had opportunity to examine the communication carefully, and no comment was forthcoming from the State Department. It is understood that the note contends that the United States in its reply did not answer all the objections made by the Dutch Government, and that the Allies, rather than Germany, are responsible for the present plight of Holland in the matter of food shortage.

It is understood that the State Department has inquired whether the Holland Government is willing to have the correspondence relating to the requisitioning of the Dutch ships made public, and that Holland has replied that it has no objection.

Nothing has reached Washington officially in confirmation of the report that the Dutch Government has decreed that Dutch ships shall not sail from Holland. In any event, it is understood, such a measure will not affect the departure from Holland of three vessels to replace the steamers Java, Stella, and Hollandia, the latter from an Argentine port, taking on cargo in the United States under an agreement entered into between the two Governments. As soon as these vessels sail from America three of equivalent tonnage are to be released in Holland. It is not known whether the substitute ship for the Hollandia will come to the United States or to Argentina, this point not yet having been settled in the negotiations now going forward.

The War Trade Board has refused a request of the Dutch Government that three additional Dutch-owned ships in the United States be permitted to sail with foodstuffs for Holland, the Dutch position being that, if three additional vessels are released in Holland at the same time, as required by the War Trade Board, they would have to leave in ballast.

LONDON, May 22.—The prohibition of the departure of all Dutch ships from Dutch ports, the Rotterdam correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says he learns, is connected with a new move by the German Government to compel Holland to sign on Berlin's terms the long-pending economic agreement, which Holland has declined to do owing to the onerous conditions imposed by Germany.

The German Government, accordingly, has refused a safe conduct to Dutch shipping through the war zone, and has seized the steamship Megrez, which Holland had chartered to fetch a cargo of wood from Sweden. The seizure was a direct challenge to Holland, and, it is added, the prohibition of further sailings is the sequel.

AMSTERDAM, May 22.—August Phillips, the Dutch Minister to the United States, who recently returned on a leave of absence because of ill-health, has requested that he be relieved of his post at Washington, according to advices from The Hague today. The Minister's request, it is stated, is made on medical advice.

SAVE AVIATORS AT SEA.

Fishing Smack Rescues Flyers Clinging to Disabled Sea Plane.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., May 22.—Captain Joseph Carman and the crew of the fishing boat Salmato this afternoon saved two aviators whose seaplane became disabled several miles off shore. They were clinging to the wings of the machine when taken aboard the fishing boat.

Engine trouble compelled the aviators to descend, and for three hours they were in danger of drowning as the air tanks were punctured when the seaplane struck the water. The flyers refused to give their names.

TO EASE PORT CONGESTION.

Dock Commissioner Hulbert Tells of Plans of His Department.

The present shipping congestion in the Port of New York is largely due to the failure of the responsible authorities in the past to look beyond Manhattan Island in the development of the city's waterfront, said Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert yesterday before the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. The Commissioner told of the plans of his department to bring about relief by cooperating with the Federal Government for shipping improvements in Jamaica Bay and South Brooklyn.

"If we had not been so provincial in our ideas with respect to the improvement of this port," said Commissioner Hulbert, "we would have seen that the Empire City depended for her supremacy on the development of the harbor as a whole and not upon any restrictive portion. Instead of petitioning the Secretary of War to extend the North River pierhead line further out into the river or frantically digging back into the upland, so as to secure longer piers in an already crowded district, we should have done the perfectly obvious thing, taken advantage of the splendid facilities of the waterfront of Brooklyn and the other boroughs. Had a broad, comprehensive plan been adopted for the whole port it could not have been subjected to any pressure that would have strained its facilities. The plan would have been sufficiently elastic to meet every demand.

"Because of the lack of a broad policy and a national perspective, the outbreak of the war found the facilities of the port totally inadequate to meet the sudden and extensive demands of the various branches of the Government. What I have learned as Dock Commissioner has made me determined to open New York's front door by making the commercial development of Jamaica Bay and Staten Island an actuality.

Commissioner Hulbert said that he believed the $40,000,000 war base warehouses which the Government is constructing at Bay Ridge would pave the way for the building of a tunnel from the terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Greenville, on the New Jersey side of the bay, to Bay Ridge. This, with the giving of Jamaica Bay direct railroad connection with the whole country, would go far toward assuring the commercial future of the port. He said that he had recommended to the Sinking Fund Commission what he considered to be the most effective plan for the utilization of the advantages of Jamaica Bay. This provided for the construction of a bulkhead from Barren Island to Mill Basin, near Bergen Beach, and for the building of fourteen piers extending to the main channel, each to be 1,000 feet in length, with the suggestion that twenty-eight warehouses be erected in the rear of these piers.

FAVORS WOMEN AS POLICE.

Magistrate McAdoo Compliments Girl on Her Detective Work.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo expressed himself in favor of the appointment of women to the Police Department in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning when he praised the amateur detective work of a girl who appeared in court to prosecute a man charged with petty larceny.

The girl, Jean Reilly, works for the Westcott Express Company as a stenographer, and lives at 351 West Twentieth Street. On Sunday afternoon while seated at a window on the ground floor of her home, she said she saw across the street a wagon of the American Express standing at the curb and two men acting suspiciously. She stated in court that she saw these men take a package from the wagon and proceed down the street with it. She hurried from the house and followed them to Thirtieth Street and Ninth Avenue, where, she said, she saw them hand the package to another man. The two then disappeared.

In court today the prisoner gave his name as Carmine Dedesco, 20 years old, but refused to give an address. Chief Magistrate then held him for trial in Special Sessions.

He turned to Miss Reilly and complimented her on her work, saying:

"Now that we have a special women's division of the Police Department, I shall take great pleasure in recommending you to Commissioner Enright as a member. You have shown exceptional ability and fine citizenship in causing this man's arrest. You have the physique, and should make a fine addition to our force. I wish to thank you for what you have done."

TO HAVE POLICE POWERS.

Reserves to Get Status of Regular Force, Announces Leach.

Acting Commissioner of Police John A. Leach, in addressing 600 officers of New York's 10,000 police reserves at a conference held at Police Headquarters Tuesday night, surprised them with the announcement that the reserves will be installed with the same power vested in the regular police officers of the city. They will be sworn in as peace officers. That will allow them to carry revolvers, wear uniforms and shields and to carry handcuffs and club. The only difference between the regular policemen and the reserves, it was explained, will be in the matter of compensation. The reserves will serve gratuitously. Commissioner Leach instructed the officers to inform the men on the subject. The reserves will be classified as special officers.

GOVERNOR PROMISES AID.

But Writes That Suppression of German Papers Is Federal Matter.

At the preliminary meeting held by Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, Chairman of the American Defense Society's Committee for Suppressing All Things German, at the Hotel McAlpin recently, it was decided to send a copy of a resolution calling for the suspension of German language newspapers to Governor Whitman, Mayor Hylan, and the President. The Governor, through his secretary, sent a letter to Mrs. Field yesterday promising that he would act the moment the Federal authorities directed him to do so. The letter, in part, read:

> The Governor is intensely interested in your communication of May 8 and the work which is being furthered by your society. Of course, as yo uknow, certain ideas which are conveyed in your letter are such as would be handled by the Federal Government and any action taken by the State would be at the direction of the Federal authorities.
> You may rest assured that the Governor will do everything possible in assisting your society.

In announcing that the society would soon renew its street speaking campaign, which had been interrupted by poor weather, Mrs. Field added:

"I hope the Federal Government will step in now and take some action. I have just read in one of the newspapers that American prisoners of war are being shamefully treated in German prison camps. One American related that after being in a cell heated to an unnaturally high temperature he was turned out in the snow and required to sand at 'attention' for a certain length of time. And yet at home here we have American mothers who consider my crusade against the German newspapers sheer fanaticism."

REV. DR. M. J. SAVAGE DIES SUDDENLY AT 76

Ex-Pastor of Church of Messiah, Noted for His Advanced Views, Was to Wed in June.

BOSTON, May 22.—The Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage of Cleveland, Ohio, a leading minister of the Unitarian Church, died suddenly at a hotel here today. Dr. Savage, who was 76 years old, came here two weeks ago and was to have been married in June to Miss Katharine Jones of Brockton. He was ill only a few hours.

Dr. Savage retired from the active ministry in 1906, after serving for ten years as pastor of the Church of the Messiah in New York City. During his career he aroused much public attention because of the advanced views expressed in some of his books.

In his day one of the most direct and forceful speakers the pulpits of this city had ever seen. Dr. Savage, in spite of his mental vigor, suffered throughout his life from illnesses induced by overtried nerves. Born June 10, 1841, he passed a sickly childhood in the small Maine town of Norridgewock, and when the time came prepared for entrance to college, but could not take the course because of poor health. His enforced retirement from the world caused him to turn his thoughts toward religion, and when an opportunity shortly presented itself he entered the Bangor Theological Seminary, and was graduated in 1864. During Autumn of the same year he married Ella A. Dodge, daughter of the Rev. John S. Dodge of Harvard, Mass.

Dr. Savage became well known in this city when in 1896 he was brought from the Church of the Unity, Boston, to the Church of the Messiah, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, to assist the pastor, the Rev. Robert Collyer, whose strength was beginning to feel the effect of advanced age. He was singled out at once not only because of the fire of his preaching, but also for the originality of his views, and in 1898 succeeded to the pastorate, Dr. Collyer having resigned.

One of his beliefs was that there was communication between living minds without bodily contact, and that living intelligences might be impressed by invisible intelligences. In support of these views he cited experiences of his own and published his books, "Life Beyond Death," and "Can Telepathy Explain?" He maintained that he could not possibly doubt that unseen powers existed, from actual facts to which he was prepared to swear.

But the literary activities of the preacher were by no means limited to this abstruse subject. For thirty years before his retirement from the active pastorate his sermons had been published. He wrote on many subjects, and, altogether, more than thirty works have come from his pen. Among the better known of them are "The Religion of Evolution," "Social Problems," and "The Passing and Permanent in Religion.' He was, too, a poet, and published three volumes of verses, most of which had been embodied in his sermons.

AIRMEN FILL TEXAS SKIES.

Formation Flying Furnishes Thrilling Spectacle in All Camps.

DALLAS, Texas, May 22.—The aviators have given Texas another spectacle. Formation flying, which now is being practiced in all the aviation camps, is so "different," so impressive, and so thrilling to witness that it has overcome the ennui with which the average citizen has viewed a sky flecked with individual aviators, and the epidemic of "arched neck," which was common when the aviators first came south to practice, again threatens.

There is something about the appearance of airplanes in formation, each flier rigidly keeping an exact distance from the others, that impresses one with the feeling that these men actually have control of the air. The single airplane may respond to conditions in the air, rising and falling to take advantage of the atmospheric situation, but in formation flying each must maintain his proper place, and the sight of a fleet of machines flying in a triangle or in a square causes the realization that conquest of the air had advanced to a point heretofore unrealized.

Most of those who are now perfecting their skill in formation flying are "bombers." Aviators on this duty must travel in groups, guards flying at the side, before, behind, and above the planes which carry explosives to be dropped upon the enemy. The leader usually flies much higher than the others in the party, not only for the advantage of the additional vision his height will give, but also so as to be able to dart down upon any enemy plane which undertakes to break up the party.

The scout planes travel alone and the aviators who will adhere to this branch of the service are not so much in need of skill at formation flying. Neither is the artillery control branch nor the contact patrol, which latter branch must perfect itself in flying low to report the position of its own and enemy troops during the progress of a battle.

THREE LOST WITH TANKER.

Killed by Torpedo That Sank the William Rockefeller.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The Navy Department has received a dispatch from Vice Admiral Sims at London stating that the American oil tanker William Rockefeller was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in European waters on May 18.

Latest reports indicate that one engineer officer and two men of the engineer force were killed, names not yet known. Eleven officers and sixty-one of the crew have been landed, none seriously injured. The William Rockefeller was an oil tanker of 7,157 tons gross.

Morris Miller, 3 East 105th Street, New York, was paymaster on the Rockefeller, and had crossed the war zone nine times. He was on the Antilles when it was torpedoed and was given up as dead, but after floating four hours was picked up by the Alcedo. The Finland, on which he was coming back to this country, was torpedoed.

Recently in Washington Secretary Daniels asked Miller whether he would prefer sea or shore duty, and Miller replied that he "would see the war through on the sea."

DR. WARBASSE REINSTATED.

Kings County Medical Society Will Investigate Charges Against Him.

Dr. James Peter Warbasse of Brooklyn, dropped from membership in the Kings County Medical Society at a meeting of that organiztion on April 16 last, was on Tuesday night restored to membership, but under charges. About one hundred physicians attended the meeting, which was held in the rooms of the society, 1,313 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. A letter received from Dr. Warbasse was read, in which he apologized for the article published in a medical journal some weeks ago, in which it was intimated that the rich could obtain certificates from physicians showing they were physically unfit for military duties.

At the conclusion of the meeting the announcement was made that a committee, consisting of Dr. Frederick C. Holden, President of the society, with Dr. John A. Lee, Vice President, and the other officers, was named to investigate the charges and report at the June meeting. Dr. Warbasse was not present at the meeting on Tuesday night, but he had sent letters to the members explaining the article objected to.

DR. MASARYK COMING HERE.

Slavs to Honor Leader of Suppressed Nationalities in Austria.

Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, ex-Professor of Philosophy in the Czech University of Prague, and now head of the Czechoslovak National Committee, organizer of the Czechoslovak armies which have fought against Austria in Russia and are now fighting in Italy and France, will spend the latter part of this week in New York. His presence here will be made the occasion for a celebration, not only by the Czechoslovaks, but also by other Slavonic nationalities, for he is looked on as one of the greatest Slav scholars and statesmen and is spoken of as the man likely to be the first president of the Bohemian republic if the Allies win complete victory.

The principal event of his stay here will be a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall on Friday night, at which Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler will preside. The speakers, besides Professor Masaryk, will include Senator William J. Kenyon of Iowa and Congressman Adolph J. Sabath of Chicago. Before the meeting a parade of Czech, Slovak, Jugoslav, and Russian organizations will be held, starting from Seventy-first Street and Avenue A, marching through the Bohemian quarter of the upper east side and then into Fifth Avenue at Seventy-second Street. Professor Masaryk will review the procession from the balcony of the Plaza Hotel.

Dr. Masaryk is under sentence of death in Austria. He was born in Moravia in 1850, studied at the Universities of Vienna and Leipsic, and married Miss Charlotte Garrigue of Brooklyn.

GERMANS BLAME MERCIER.

Dr. Hall Says Spain Is Told He Caused Destruction of Churches.

Dr. Edward Hagaman Hall, Secretary of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, speaking last night before the Laymen's Club of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on the destruction of the cathedrals and works of art in Europe, said that the Germans have widely distributed a pamphlet in Spain which blames Cardinal Mercier for the German destruction of religious edifices.

The pamphlet states that it was due to "the treachery of Cardinal Mercier that the Germans were forced to teach the Belgians a lesson." The pamphlet adds that seventy-five churches and cathedrals were either destroyed entirely or rendered useless by the German armies.

Dr. Hall showed stereopticon views of the destroyed buildings, of the wanton destruction of tombs, and the desecration of graves by the Teuton invaders. He showed views of the Cathedral of Rheims before and after its destruction, and a large number of other churches, including churches in Italy and Alsace as well as in Northern France and Belgium.

EAST SIDE TO PARADE.

Whitman Will Review the Coming War Savings Demonstration.

Governor Whitman yesterday sent a telegram to the War Savings Committee accepting its invitation to review the east side parade for War Savings on the afternoon of Memorial Day. The reviewing stand will be at St. Mark's Place and Second Avenue. In addition to the Governor, there will be representative of the army and navy, city officials, and members of the War Savings Committee in the reviewing party.

Twenty thousand east siders will be in line as a tribute to their sons who have gone to the front. Among the features of the procession will be a division of peddlers, who are Treasury Department agents, with their push carts; a division of Jewish Red Cross nurses, and a division of east side "war mothers," each with a service flag.

Major Gen. Bell has been requested to send a detachment of east side boys now in training at Camp Upton. Some of the other features will be delegations from the Independent Order of B'rith Abraham, the Educational Alliance, the Henry Street Settlement, the east side schools, and the Yiddish newspapers.

Charles F. Murphy's home district is one of the first to begin War Savings work, in accordance with an arrangement entered into by the two big political parties to boom the sale of Thrift Stamps through their district organizations. Justice Edward F. Boyle, executive member of the regular Democratic organization of the Twelfth Assembly District, announced yesterday that the members had started a pledge chain in the form of a printed card, the acceptance of which obligated the recipient to fill the Thrift Card accompanying it and to pass on the pledge with another Thrift Card to some friend. Two hundred cards were sent out by the organization several days ago, and already the chain has spread throughout the district.

HYLAN LOSES CLERK TO WAR

T. P. Casey, in Mayor's Office Since 1907, Is Called in Draft.

Terence P. Casey, who has been executive clerk of the Mayor's office since 1907, was yesterday called in the draft and ordered to report at Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga., next Sunday. Mr. Casey lives at 2,863 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, and his salary is $2,340 a year. Yesterday the employes in the Mayor's office gave him a wrist watch. This is the second of the Mayor's private staff who has been called into the service in the last month. The first to go was John F. Sinnott, who was the Mayor's executive secretary. He was ordered to Camp Upton and his place has not yet been filled.

Joseph A. Solovei, personal friend of Mayor Hylan, who was recently appointed head of the Brooklyn Bureau of Street Openings in the Corporation Counsel's office, was yesterday removed from Class 3 in the draft and put in Class 1 by the Appeal Board. Solovei obtained deferred classification from Local Board 86 of Brooklyn upon the ground of dependent relatives. William R. Conklin, Government appeal agent, objected to the action of the board and declared that Solovei's parents are well to do.

TO TEACH X-RAY WORK.

Hunter College Will Train Women to Meet Present Demand.

An X-ray class will be a feature of the Hunter College Summer School, which will open on June 3. The class is formed in response to a demand from hospitals in different parts of the country which need trained workers to supply the places of men who have gone to the front. High school graduates and nurses who have completed a part of their course are eligible for the class. Dr. Elsie Fox will be the instructor. The charge for the tuition is $75, not including the cost of plates.

Two women graduates of a Winter course in bacteriology at Hunter College are now in the army camps with the rank of Second Lieutenant, and later will be sent to the front. A course in clinical pathology is to be opened at the college with daily instruction. As a patriotic offering this Summer, the college will open and give free instruction at its evening classes, except those in X-ray and bacteriology, to the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of men in the army and navy, an enrollment fee of only $3 being required. A new class in wireless telegraphy is soon to open. There are 142 courses in the Summer schedule of the college. Professor R. B. Earle is in charge.

M'ADOO SELECTING RAILROAD CHIEFS

tions out of the rentals received from the Government, and not out of the operating income under Government control. Whether these executives receive the same remuneration that they did before they were deposed is a question which the Railroad Administration will leave for the stockholders and Boards of Directors of the individual lines to decide. The salaries which they receive, however, must not be charged against operating expenses in computing the rentals. These salaries, therefore, must be met directly by the stockholders, and not by the Government.

Saving of $2,000,000 a Year.

The Railroad Administration today declined to make public the salaries which are being received at present by the different railroad Presidents. A comparatively few, it is said, however, are found in the class who receive from $75,000 to $100,000 or more, and the large majority run from $25,000 to $40,000.

The saving that the Railroad Administration will effect by refusing to pay the high salaries of the Presidents is difficult to estimate. It is probable that the total will be at least $2,000,000 annually and possibly considerably more.

Neither has the question of the salaries to be paid to the Federal Managers been settled. It is possible that a few of these will receive as high as $40,000, but such cases will be the exception. In most instances the Government will not pay more than $20,000. The importance of the work will be the basis of the salary.

It is probable that the first announcement concerning Government salaries will be in connection with the sum to be paid Regional Directors. After consulting with these men recently Mr. McAdoo decided that they must appear only as Government employes and accept the Government wage, and to this all agreed.

A. H. Smith, Director for the Eastern region, is said to have received $100,000 or more annually as President of the New York Central System. His present post is considered one of the most important in the Railroad Administration.

It was said today that where the President of a railroad was not named as the Federal manager it was probable that one of the Vice Presidents in charge of operation would be put in charge. The Regional Directors have been keeping in close touch with the situation in order to determine with as little delay as possible upon the men best fitted for the places.

Appointments to Come Soon.

It was understood that the first of the new Federal managers would be named within a day or two, and that the new organization would be completed within a month. C. H. Markham, who has been named Director of the Allegheny Region, was at the offices of the Railroad Administration today for consultation with members of Mr. McAdoo's Cabinet. His region includes the Pennsylvania lines east of and including Pittsburgh and Erie, the Baltimore & Ohio, and other important systems. His recommendations to the Director General are said to be ready for consideration.

The Railroad Administration is determined that its new organization shall be completed in time to prepare fully for transportation conditions necessary to meet demands for shipments of coal and steel and hundreds of thousands of tons of foods and materials for the overseas forces.

It is the ambition and hope of the Railroad Administration, it is said, to handle all war orders and still maintain a system which will call for the least dislocation of the ordinary business of the nation.

How far that policy can be carried out, it is believed, will depend in no small measure on the complete co-operation of all agencies which have to do with the operation of the railroads.

There was a belief expressed today that plenty of work would be found for the railroad Presidents who were not returned as the Federal Managers in charge of the operating policies of their railroads. Some of these Presidents, it was said, had been confronted by the problems of protecting the future of their railroads as well as the desires of the Government to use the individual lines in a manner which might not appear to be to their best interests after the war.

Where such problems arose the Railroad Administration, it was said, had been guided only by the urgent demands of the Government at war, although seeking in every way to protect the interests of the stockholders. It has refused to budge from the position that in the present emergency the only tenable Government policy is one which would best serve the nation, even in opposition to the beliefs of some of the railroad officials.

FORESEEN IN WALL STREET.

Little Adverse Comment on McAdoo's Railroad Order.

Such railroad Presidents, executive officials and Directors of railroads as could be seen yesterday in New York declined to comment for publication on the action of Director General McAdoo in putting Federal managers in charge of the railroads. The reason given in most cases was that, beyond newspaper accounts, they knew nothing about the matter, and were waiting official information as to the new order and its precise meaning.

The general tone of comment in financial circles, however, was very moderate, and in many cases approving, save for the generally expressed opinion that the Director General might possibly have been less abrupt in his manner of making known his decision, where is affected so many interests.

A Director in several big systems prepared a memorandum precisely one month before Mr. McAdoo announced his decision, on April 22 last, predicting that the Director General would take just the action he has taken, that it was inevitable from the circumstances, and advising his fellow Directors to consider what action they would take not only in relation to this particular step, but to the probable general policy of the Director General in cutting down the overhead expenses of all the roads, their salary lists, and their number of employes, to the lowest point consistent with safe and efficient operation. He was, and still is, of the opinion that in the interests of the corporation as distinct from those of the operating property, it will be advisable for the Directors of almost any railroad in this situation to keep the corporate organization intact, so far as possible, even though holding men "in reserve" at high salaries, against the time that the roads are returned to the stockholders.

Another opinion frequently expressed yesterday in one form or another was that the decision of the Director General would be very beneficial in clearing the air, and would be welcomed in many cases by the railroad Presidents themselves, as relieving them from a delicate and embarrassing situation arising from their dual loyalty to the Government as operating agents, and to the Directors and stockholders as corporate officials.

Elements Productive of Friction.

"The whole question of the distinction between Government control and corporate control, where one ends and the other begins, has been so delicate that it is really remarkable that there has been no more friction than has occurred," said another prominent executive, who cited as an instance various questions which had arisen between the Government and the Directors of roads which own and operate large coal properties and have considerable real estate interests, regarding the control of funds, responsibility for which could not be divided between the coal properties and the railroad property.

The majority of bankers and Directors of railroads were of the opinion, that if the Presidents of the roads in which they were interested did not enlist with Mr. McAdoo as his operating men, they should be retained to look after the corporate interests of the companies. The only dissent from this opinion came from a leading banker who is Director of several roads, who said that such cases would have to be dealt with individually, according to the organization of each road and the place filled in it by the President.

"In one case," said this man, "we have a President who is not only the active operating head of the railroad, but an immensely valuable manager of all the financial and business affairs of the corporation—who in that capacity alone is worth many times the salary we pay him. Naturally we want to keep him if we possibly can, no matter what happens to the operation of the road. If he goes with Mr. McAdoo, we feel that we are making a big sacrifice in relinquishing his services.

"On the other hand, there are many other roads in which the President is an operating man, pure and simple, and the Chairman and other members of the board, taking a much more active part in the corporate affairs of the company, look after all that for him. In justice to our stockholders we could not continue to pay a big salary to a man who is nothing but an operating man when we have nothing left for him to operate. However, a man like that will almost certainly go with Mr. McAdoo."

Two other questions which interested the railroad world keenly yesterday were the amount of overhead expense which Mr. McAdoo by this arrangement would succeed in transferring from the shoulders of the Government to that of the railroad corporations, with its effect upon the contract negotiations, and the general reduction in salaries which is expected among the Presidents who stay with Mr. McAdoo.

Regarding the first question, it was pointed out that the problem involves the transference of charges on the railroads' books, from the item of operating expenses to that of deductions from corporate income. The Government, under the law, pays all operating expenses and guarantees the corporations owning the roads a net operating income equal to their average net operating income for three years before they were taken over. Consequently Mr. McAdoo has the authority to discharge any officer or man of any company whose salary is charged against operating expenses, and if the corporation retains him that means it assumes the charge against its rental from the Government. Several prominent railroad officials remarked yesterday that they did not know themselves against which item their salaries were charged, and consequently whether they were Government officials or corporate officials.

May Put Maximum at $15,000.

It is the general opinion that Mr. McAdoo will pay no salaries to his operating men above $20,000 a year, and that it is not improbable he will make $15,000 the maximum—either of these figures, it was pointed out, being larger than the Director General's own salary. This means that the men who accept office as Federal operating agents will make very considerable financial sacrifices.

The average salary of the President of a big railroad is believed to be about $50,000 a year. There are three railroad Presidents who are supposed to have received $100,000 a year, two of whom are now in the Government service, and another executive also in Mr. McAdoo's organization, who received $75,000.

"We have always gone on the theory," said the banker already quoted, "that to secure the best service of a man we made President of a road—and nothing but the best service would do us—we must pay him enough money to relieve him absolutely of all worry about his financial situation and his future, so that he could concentrate every bit of his time and attention and energy on his job.

"It has always been worth the money to us to enable him to have the best doctor and the best dentist in the United States, to have a limousine to carry him to and from his office in stormy weather, and to make sure that he never would be bothered with domestic worries and cares of any description. It usually has taken a man from fifteen to thirty-five years to rise to the Presidency of a big road. After that he is good, if he takes care of himself and his corporation takes good care of him, for ten or twenty years more, and when his service is over we don't want him to go out of office a broken man with no more money saved than enough to give him a bare living."

It was said repeatedly yesterday in Wall Street that the new order increased the probability that the railroads never would be returned to private ownership, at least on the basis on which they existed before last December.

OCCUPIED DISTRICTS TO GET MORE FOOD

Starvation in Belgium and France Again Prevented by America's Action.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—President Wilson today approved arrangements which will remove the menace of starvation which the ten million inhabitants in German-occupied Belgium and France have been facing. Herbert C. Hoover, as Chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, announced tonight that the President had approved the restoring of the fleet of steamers employed by the commission to the original number and the placing at the commission's disposal sufficient tonnage for the dispatch of 90,000 tons of foodstuffs in the next ninety days.

Mr. Hoover said the American and British Governments had undertaken each to find half of the necessary shipping. Adjustments have been made in the American shipping position, including the removal of 50,000 tons from the Cuban sugar trade through reduction in sugar allotments to the confectionery trade.

"As a result of the diversion of a large part of the shipping employed by the Relief Commission to other war purposes," said Mr. Hoover, "it had been necessary to reduce the bread ration to six ounces per diem, this being an ounce below the present German ration, with corresponding reductions in other foodstuffs. Even with the additional shipping, the Belgian ration must be of the most meagre character, but I am confident that actual starvation on a wholesale scale has again been prevented."

THE COTTON MARKET

Nearly everybody had cotton to sell on the local market, and very few had cotton to buy. Most of those who had cotton to buy apparently went upstairs, where an agent of the Alien Property Custodian had 5,891 bales of cotton to dispose of at auction, virtually all of it of good quality and grades coming up to the Government's specifications. This cotton, of known grade and deliverable on the spot for cash, brought prices higher than the official spot cotton quotation on the New York Cotton Exchange for three weeks past—more than 200 points higher than yesterday's official spot quotation—but this had no effect on the futures market, which sold off from 50 to 97 points on the session, closing weak at the low prices of the day and of the current season for 1918 crop months.

At the very opening the bulls were faced with a crop report by one of the most trustworthy private authorities, giving the condition at 82.4, with 2 per cent. increase in acreage and 14 per cent. more fertilizer available. The opening, consequently, was 15 to 59 points off, which made an admirable opportunity for short floor traders, who recently have been acting cautiously and covering on quick turns. They brought the market back 30-odd points, but the Government weekly weather report was fully as good as had been expected, some Wall Street interests offered big blocks of July, and from then on it was a downhill market all the way.

There was a little bargain hunting by trade representatives toward the close, but this amounted to no more than sniping on the outskirts of the market movement, and had no perceptible effect on its progress. July at 23.70 was 1,010 trading points, or $50.50 a bale, below its top price of the season, April 4, of 33.80.

| | Open. | High. | Low. | Close. | Tuesday. |

WHEAT.

The weekly weather and crop bulletin gave a very favorable report on the progress of the wheat crop during the last week, the main complaints being of too low temperatures in the Northwest and of a lack of moisture in one or two spots in the Far West. On the whole, the crop is doing well and the promise is maintained.

RYE.

CORN.

The corn market experienced a sharp reaction, prices closing with net losses of ⅞c to 1¼c. The downward tendency was due largely to a lack of the demand from shorts, which has recently been the principal sustaining factor. In the local cash market No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at $1.50; No. 4 yellow, $1.40, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

A break of over 2 cents a bushel in the price of May oats in Chicago was looked upon as very strong evidence that the congestion in that position had been relieved, and the whole list was weak in sympathy. The Western cash markets were sharply lower, especially No. 3 white oats, which was quoted at ½c to 1c under May, and it was the prevailing impression that holders of the cash article will tender it for delivery. The local cash market was weak; standard quoted at 83c to 83½c; No. 2 white, 84c; No. 3 white, 82½c to 83c; No. 4 white, 82c to 82½c; fancy clipped white, 85c to 88c; ordinary clipped white, 84c to 85c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The firmer tone to the hog market and comparatively light receipts at Western points caused an early upturn in the provision list, but when grain turned weak in the afternoon prices sold off and closed at about the lowest. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 19,000, estimated for Thursday, 24,000; Kansas City, received 17,000 and Omaha, 16,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

There was further liquidation in the coffee market yesterday, and on the call July broke sharply, opening 17 points below the previous close, with other months showing declines of 2 to 5 points. Trading was quite active after a prolonged period of stagnation, but prices ruled irregular, the close showing net declines of 5 to 12 points. A good part of the demand for the late positions was believed to be trade covering. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Shipments of raw sugar from Cuba continue liberal, and refiners are amply supplied for the time being and are now in a position to operate their plants on full time. Some interests are still withdrawn, being oversold and trying to catch up on old orders, while others are able to make a better distribution throughout the country, and shipments are said to be fairly prompt.

The International Sugar Committee is now spreading raw sugar purchases over into June, the committee reporting purchases of 395,000 bags Cubas, late May, first half June shipments, at 4.985c, cost and freight, and 80 tons Venezuelas, afloat, at 4.749c, cost, insurance, and freight.

Burns Bros.' Profit $1,449,833.

The report of Burns Brothers, Inc., for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1918, shows net sales of $20,984,483, as compared with $15,235,909 for the previous year, and net profits of $1,449,833, an increase for the year of $160,049, of which $645,820 was carried to profit and loss surplus after payment of all dividends. The company's surplus is now $2,605,584, and the company has reserved for Federal taxes the sum of $458,701.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks closed weak in an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Selling on a heavy scale developed in the final hour, causing a sharp reaction throughout the list. Substantial earlier gains were wiped out, and net losses from a fraction to 3 points were registered at the close. Steel, railroad, equipment, and marine shares were the main objectives in the downward drive, induced by the heavy selling pressure.

Stocks Irregular, with Losses the Rule—Rails Off on New Order.

After a good beginning stocks again inclined to heaviness yesterday and closed generally under the previous day's final prices. Losses in most issues were small, and while there was some increase in activity over Tuesday's modest total there was evident a growing disposition on the part of traders to free themselves from commitments pending further light on the proposals to reopen the taxation question at an early date. From some source the Stock Exchange obtained a report that the German drive had been resumed in definite fashion, and selling of stocks for a time was credited to this fact. It was also reported over Washington wires that as a result of the decision to leave to the President the matter of enacting new revenue measures Congress would be asked to take up Mr. McAdoo's recommendations.

The movement of prices was irregular, with only a few issues maintaining at the close any of the early gains. The most striking exception in this class was American Cotton Oil, which, after a long period of comparative inactivity became suddenly much in demand and advanced sharply. The railroads moved uncertainly, finally losing ground. The steel shares were rather strong before noon, but made their lowest prices shortly before the close, Steel common reacting to 107⅝ at the end of the session, with the preferred closing a ground. The Marine issues both lost little above par, while the 6 per cent. bonds fell back to 98½.

To some extent the selling of the rails was based on the uncertainty created by Mr. McAdoo's abrupt dismissal of all of the railroad Presidents. Among the bankers and executives themselves it was conceded that the operating men had been occupying an anomalous position which the Director General had properly terminated. From the investors' standpoint the turning out of men who had reached their positions in most cases as a result of many years of faithful service reopened doubts as to the intention of the Administration to return the properties to the owners eighteen months after the war. The discharge of all traffic solicitors some weeks ago, followed now by the release of the Presidents, threatens to disrupt railroad organizations to such an extent that, if it be believed that the roads are to be turned back as the law now provides, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to reconstruct the old executive machinery. It is expected that most of the officers will be asked to continue as Government employes and will make the personal secrifice necessary to accept.

Amazement at the ambitious nature of the Government's plans for the steel industry continues to be voiced by trade organs. The Iron Age says that if all of the steel called for in the surprising total made up by the War Industries Board can be put to use in the specified delivery period it is obvious that there will be very little steel left for ordinary consumption. Manufacturers doubt that as much steel as is being called for can be used by shipyards and other Government departments, but the committee has nevertheless gone to work to increase deliveries on the theory that the steel can be made use of as fast as it is called for.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

Securities Firm on Prospects of Reinvestment.

LONDON, May 22.—The stock market maintained a good tone today despite the smallness of business. Gilt edge securities were firm on the prospects of the reinvestment of £50,000,000 Government dividends to be disbursed at the end of the month. Shipping shares were in demand on International Mercantile Marine purchase reports. Banking shares were lower and speculative issues quiet.

Money was slightly dearer and discount rates were steady.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 22.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 59 francs, 30 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs, 15½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs, 75 centimes.

The Country's Largest Bank.

The statement of condition of the National City Bank of New York as of May 10, issued in response to the call of the Controller of the Currency, shows deposits of $628,196,000 and total resources of $747,241,000. The National City is the largest banking institution in the United States, and, exclusive of Government banks, is outranked only by three London joint stock banks which recently effected mergers, chief among which is the London City and Midland Bank, Ltd., which, even before its amalgamation with the London Joint Stock Bank, had deposits of $1,102,758,000, and resources of about $1,200,000,000. Forty years ago the deposits of the 2,056 National Banks in the United States amounted to slightly less than the deposits of the National City Bank today. Fifteen years ago the deposits of the 362 National Banks in this State totaled less than $636,000,000, and their aggregate resources were only $1,322,000,000, or about double today's total for the single institution. The report of May 10 is not the highest record made by the National City Bank, its figures for Dec. 31, 1917, showing deposits of more than $705,000,000 and resources of $812,681,000.

Selling a Seat at Auction.

A very unusual, though not unprecedented, action will be the sale at auction, on the floor of the Cotton Exchange on May 31, of the Exchange membership held by G. L. Schiffer, a floor trader, who made an assignment of his affairs after the big break of early April. The sum realized from the sale of his seat will be used to satisfy various claims made against him under the Exchange rules, and the balance will be turned over to his attorney.

A Boost for American Cotton Oil.

Three hundred shares of American Cotton Oil changed hands in the first hour of trading yesterday. At 11 o'clock a sudden outburst of buying appeared which carried the price upward from 38½ to 41⅞ before noon, and to 42⅝ at the maximum of the afternoon. The day's transactions comprised more than 18,000 shares, an exceptional turnover for an ordinarily quiet stock, and the net gain was 4⅛ points. The preferred paralleled the common with a 4-point gain. In the first hour the commission houses heard that a prominent firm had sent a message over its wires to branch offices that at 11 o'clock a stock would be named which appeared due for an advance because of its good earnings. On the hour "American Cotton Oil" was flashed out, and orders came pouring in. It has been a long time since a method at all similar to this has been used to stimulate interest in a particular stock, and the Street had something to talk about the rest of the day.

Aetna Explosives Situation.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals as to whether or not the postponed annual meeting of the Aetna Explosives Company may be held at an early date is expected to be handed down at any time. There have been rumors in the financial district for several days that representatives of the common and preferred stockholders have been holding "conversations" over a possible settlement of their differences without further legal manoeuvres, although attorneys interested in the situation said yesterday that no definite results were yet in sight.

Essex County, N. J., Notes Sold.

There was awarded yesterday to J. S. Rippel & Co. of Newark, N. J., $1,000,000 of Essex County, N. J., notes on a 5.14 per cent. basis. There were four notes of $250,000 each. They are dated May 24 and mature Dec. 28.

President Noble Honored.

Governors of the Stock Exchange recorded their appreciation of the services of H. G. S. Noble as President for four years and his acceptance of a fifth term by recording a resolution on their minutes yesterday. The Governors emphasized their gratitude for Mr. Noble's consent to serve again, "mindful of his responsibilities to the nation and regardless of the personal sacrifice involved." Mr. Noble has been a Governor for twenty years. A tablet in the north wall of the Stock Exchange room records his work as a member of the Committee of Five which managed the affairs of the board when it was closed in the Summer and Autumn of 1914.

Chesapeake & Ohio Dividend.

Action on the semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company's stock was to have been taken last Friday, but the Directors postponed the matter because permission had not been obtained from Director General of Railroads, Mr. McAdoo, despite the fact that the executives of the road had been promised a definite answer by May 10. Word has not yet been received. Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the Board of Directors, is in Washington.

Rumors Further the Decline.

The pressure against stocks was insistent in the last half hour of business, when big blocks of Steel were offered and Baldwin Locomotive looked especially weak. The bears had forceful influences under which to work in the shape of rumors which appeared early in the afternoon, one being to the effect that additional taxation plans were almost certain to be considered before Congress adjourned.

Emphasizing a Discrepancy.

The auction sale of 5,891 bales of German-owned cotton held yesterday morning in the Cotton Exchange building served to emphasize the disparity between the prices manufacturers are willing to pay for high-grade cotton and the prices of contracts for future delivery, which can be satisfied at a price adjustment by low-grade cotton. With futures declining on the Exchange from 50 to 97 points, and the official spot quotation at 25.70c, there were plenty of bidders for strict to good middling lots of this cotton at 27 to 28 cents and over, premiums of 300 to 380 points on May.

Chain Stores Profiting.

Another of the new chain stores went into the dividend-paying class yesterday with the declaration of an initial quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the common stock of the S. H. Kress Company, payable Aug. 1 to stockholders of record July 20, with regular preferred dividend of 1¾ per cent., payable July 1. Permission was granted yesterday by the Stock Exchange to list the $1,849,100 of the 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock and $9,929, 200 of common stock of the reorganized S. S. Kresge Company, another chain store corporation.

The Norwegian Ships.

It is rumored along the waterfront that some of the British shipping corporations, and American shipping concerns with predominantly British connections, are not pleased with the allotment of chartered Norwegian tonnage for operation. The corporations owning these ships are in several cases controlled by British interests, but the ships were all given to strictly American firms to operate by the Shipping Board.

STEEL PRODUCTION HITS A HIGH LEVEL

DUE TO DEMANDS OF WAR

Manufacturers Set to Work to Increase Rapid Deliveries of Plates, Shell Steel, and Rails.

The stimulation imparted to the steel and iron trade by the insistence of war demands, and the emphasis laid on a greater output by the War Industries Board, is finding reflection in production. The current month promises a greater outturn of pig iron, billets, and finished products than any of the last twelve months, according to reports from the trade centres.

The Iron Age hints at a difference of opinion between the War Industries Board and steel makers over the amount of steel which the Government can absorb in a given period. At the same time it is noted that the manufacturers have set to work to increase rapidly deliveries of plates, shell steel, and rails, in which the demand is pressing.

"If all the steel in the surprising total made up by the War Board," this periodical says, "can be applied to ship, projectile, track, car, locomotive, farm implement, oil well, structural, and other war uses in the specified delivery period; there can be no escape from the conclusion that little steel can be had for ordinary consumption this year.

"The most serious factor in the situation is the loss of three months' time in the placing of locomotive and car orders—a delay costing the Allies thousands of tons of steel that by no possibility can now be delivered in 1918. Some of the steel for the new cars has been allocated this week, including 135,000 tons of plates to the Steel Corporation. The total of plates, shapes, and bars for cars is 922,110 tons, deliveries to be made in 120 days, beginning June 20.

"The Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company is about contracting to build and operate for the Government a great plant at Nicetown, Penn., to turn out 16-inch howitzers, additional land being acquired by the Government. For this and the Neville Island gun and projectile plant, which the Steel Corporation has just started to build, more heavy machine tools are wanted than present capacity for such tools can supply, and the Government is urging extensions in that industry.

"Important among the price adjustments announced on May 21 was a $6 per ton advance on cast iron water pipe, a reduction of 25 cents per 100 pound for structural and ship rivets and 15 cents for boiler rivets (a differentiation now being made) and a reduction of about 5 per cent. on smaller rivets. Copper bearing low phosphorus pig iron was advanced $2 per ton."

The Iron Trade Review states that the finished output of the Neville Island plant is to be 25,000 tons of large guns and projectiles monthly. The periodical says further:

"Great Government war enterprises of an iron and steel character continue to develop. A large program of construction in byproduct coke plants, under Government financial auspices, is to be launched. Expectations are that 1,500 additional ovens will be built at different locations. These will serve the double purpose of augmenting the supply of high explosives for military needs, and of fortifying weak spots in the coke situation against the uncertainties of Winter. The new ovens are to be rushed into service. Possible blast furnace extensions figure in these plans. A start along this line already is being made in the Wheeling district. Two new furnaces at St. Louis are being considered."

NO RIGHT TO BAR PAPERS.

Plainfield Council Hears Government Only Has Power to Suppress.

Mayor Leighton Calkins of Plainfield, N. J., advised the Common Council of that city yesterday that it was without legal power to forbid the sale of The New York American and Evening Journal in Plainfield. The Council heeded his advice.

"We should be especially careful in these times not to let our sympathy run away with our judgment," said Mayor Calkins. "Germany's justification of her outrages in Belgium was that necessity knows no law. If the Hearst papers are disloyal and ought to be suppressed the National Government is competent to act, but until it does act I am clear that local authorities should not attempt to exercise authority which does not exist."

Mayor Calkins said the newsdealers at Plainfield had decided not to handle German-language publications, not because they were all disloyal, but because they afford a more ready channel for disloyal or seditious influence, and constitute a sort of potential danger.

TRENTON, N. J., May 22.—Following the suit for $100,000 damages, started a few days ago by The New York American and Evening Journal, and the Newark Newsdealers' Supply Company against Mayor Rufford Franklin of Summit, because he induced dealers not to sell these papers, Justice Gummere today ordered the defendant to answer the suit within twenty days.

The publishing company avers that its business suffered as a result of the boycott of the Summit newsdealers.

ASSAIL EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Manufacturers Say It Increases Cost of Production Arbitrarily.

The eight-hour law enacted by Congress in June, 1912, was assailed in a resolution adopted yesterday by the National Association of Manufacturers at the final session of the twenty-third annual convention held at the Waldorf-Astoria. The law was charged with unduly increasing the cost of public and private production arbitrarily, and accordingly the association urged upon the War Industries Board the wisdom of recommending to Congress that the power formerly lodged in the President to modify the provisions of the law be restored to him. Resolutions were also passed condemning the rider to the Navy Appropriation bill which prohibits the payment of bonus or cash rewards to employes for efficient services; indorsing the use of trade acceptances in business transactions, and condemning the proposal to establish the metric system of weights and measures in this country in place of the present British system.

The association has for some time been studying the best methods to be used in restoring crippled soldiers to industry, and at the afternoon session yesterday American and Canadian Army officers told what was being accomplished in this direction. It was said that 125,000 crippled soldiers would have to be provided with and trained in occupations after the war. A development of the discussion not planned in the schedule was the demand for vocational employment now for fully 100,000 men and women injured in industrial work.

NAVAL BILL PASSES SENATE IN QUICK TIME

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The Senate passed today, by a viva voce vote, the $1,015,000,000 Naval Appropriation bill, after exactly four hours and thirty minutes of debate. It was increased about $226,000,000 over the amount originally voted by the House.

Most of the debate on the bill was focussed upon an amendment, which was adopted by a vote of 37 to 22, providing that no part of the appropriation should be available to maintain a "stop-watch" or other time-measuring device upon Government employes engaged in war work. Such a provision has popped up in nearly every naval appropriation bill for years, and has always been adopted. Linked with this provision was one providing against allowing premiums or bonus cash awards to employes on Government war work. This was stricken from the bill by a vote of 37 to 21, so that bonuses may be allowed.

Senators urging the adoption of the provision against the "stop-watch," said they could see no reason why the watch should be held over labor. They believed labor was doing its patriotic duty in the war and would do it without "tab" being kept on it.

Senator Thomas of Colorado pointed out the failure in aircraft production and the deficiency in ordnance.

"We must have artillery, the production of which is distressingly small," urged Senator Thomas. "We are engaged in the mightiest task labor has ever had and we must get the full benefit of labor. I believe we ought to expect a full day's work, and to make sure that we have it. I also favor giving bonuses to men who do especially expert work or whose product stands out."

Senator Townsend of Michigan declared that the "stop-watch" in Government arsenals in Michigan had brought production up to 100 per cent. efficiency.

The bill now goes to conference.

FOG HOLDS UP AERIAL MAIL.

Lieut. Bonsal Started from Here, but Was Forced to Return.

Fog vanquished the "cloudless mail" yesterday and the aerial mail pouches for Philadelphia and Washington left New York on mail trains. Lieutenant Bonsal, with 126 pounds of mail, ascended from Belmont Park at 11:46 o'clock this morning. He returned to the park at 12 o'clock with the message that he ran into fog near Sheepshead Bay so thick he could not see his way.

Philadelphia was notified by telephone. Mail officials there said fog would prevent a filer from starting for New York.

COMMITTEE TO PASS ON SCHOOL MANAGER

To Co-ordinate Business Departments and Bureaus, and Represent the Board.

The Board of Education yesterday referred to a special committee, consisting of Mr. Wilsey, Mr. Ryan, and Mrs. Murray, the matter of appointing an executive manager for the board. This was done after a statement by Mr. Ryan on the subject, in which he said that he had given careful consideration to the proposal, and that there was urgent need for an official who would bring together into closer co-operation all of the business departments and bureaus, who would co-operate with the Superintendent of Schools, the chief executive officer of the department, and who would be the representative of the Board of Education, acting through the President.

The executive manager, he said, should have such powers and perform such duties as the board should determine by by-law or by resolution, or as the President should deem necessary. There were a number of subjects pending before special committees that should be made the subject of investigation by such an official, acting for the board. Just as soon as the board elected an executive manager, he should be empowered to institute these inquiries with the complete co-operation of all the officials and employes of the board. One of the first matters to which his attention would be directed was to study and to report upon the organization of the departments and bureaus.

The by-laws, he said, at present prescribed the duties of the executive manager, but they should be revised to conform to the new State education law. In revising the by-laws early in January the board omitted from the list of officers the executive manager. The position has been placed in classification by the State Civil Service Commission, on Feb. 28, 1917, as in the exempt class. He recommended that the salary be fixed at $8,000 a year.

Tristram Walker Metcalfe, who has been most prominently mentioned for the position, said yesterday that he would not serve in the Department of Education. Alluring as was the position of the executive manager the opportunity for service as school editor was far more attractive. It was doubtful whether the law contemplated or permitted of the creation of a position of power for effective service within the department, such as that contemplated by members of the board. The Superintendent of Schools was under the law the chief executive officer of the school system, as well as the chief professional expert. It was his settled conviction that to establish a position of co-ordinate responsibility and power would in time result in lack of agreement and in friction that would be detrimental to the betterment of the schools. Service in a subordinate capacity would not be as attractive as the opportunities afforded by continuing the work that has now covered the period of more than fifteen years.

The special committee will report to the board next Wednesday. So far as could be learned there is at present no other candidate for the office who is assured of election.

A large number of men and women from Castleton Corners, S. I., were present at the meeting to urge on the board the necessity for a new public school building to replace School 20, which they said was old and insanitary. The new building, they said, should accommodate 1,500 pupils. Reon Barnes, Chairman of the delegation, said that they had raised $81,000 for the new school some months before consolidation, and that when consolidation had occurred he had turned this amount over to the Controller. The money, he said, had been used for other purposes.

On motion of Mr. Prall the matter was referred to the Board of Superintendents, and the delegation from Staten Island was asked to confer with them. The matter would be then reported to the Board of Education and something would probably be done to improve school conditions in that section of the city.

Union Bag and Paper Earnings.

The report of earnings of the Union Bag and Paper Corporation and subsidiaries for the quarter ended April 30, excepting the St. Maurice Paper Company, Ltd., shows balance available for dividends for the quarter of $518,945, as compared with $622,689 for the corresponding period of 1917. Gross earnings were $725,958, as compared with $863,722 the previous year.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,662 packages. Prices were fairly sustained during the early trading, the demand absorbing the stock reasonably well. The bulk of the arrivals reached the market after 12 o'clock, and an easier feeling has since developed, with indications of a decline. This applies to all grades of fresh creamery. Ladles are dragging and packing stock shows further slight decline. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 45½@46c; extras, (92 score,) 44½@45c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42@44c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 37½@41½c; thirds, 35@37c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 47½c; extras, 46½@47c; firsts, 43½@46c; seconds, 40@43c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 44@44½c; good to prime, 41½@43½c; common to fair, 35@41c; renovated, extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 33@35c; imitation creamery, firsts, 34@35c; ladles, current make, firsts, 32@33c; seconds, 30½@31c; lower grades, 29@30c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31c; No. 2, 29½@30c; lower grades, 27@29c.

EGGS.—30,648 cases. The market is in an unsatisfactory condition. The great bulk of the supply arriving lacks quality to satisfy the best class of trade, and the demand for most of the stock is still sluggish, with pressure to sell at generally weak prices. Strictly fine qualities are generally rated steady, and there is demand for better goods than are generally available, for which some buyers might be willing to pay a little more than quoted. Dirties are plentiful and pressed for sale at easier prices. Checks moving slowly unless offered at attractive figures; some interior goods are selling at very low rates. Nearby white eggs of strictly fancy quality are in limited supply, and these meet a moderate demand at sustained prices, but there is still pressure to move accumulations of average good and lower grades, and a very large part of the stock is still reported in range of 37@39c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 36@37c; storage packed, firsts, 34½@35½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 34½@35c; regular packed, firsts, 32½@34c; seconds and poorer, 28@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 29½@30½c; No. 1, regular packed, 29@29½c; No. 2 and poorer, 27@28½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 27@28½c; under grades, 20@27c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to prime, 36@37c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 35@38c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 35@37c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@35c. Duck eggs, 29@42c.

ENEMY COTTON SOLD TO AMERICAN MILLS

BOUGHT ON VERDUN PROMISE

Staple Accumulated on Prospect That France Would Be Beaten and Peace Come Quickly.

By order of A. Mitchell Palmer, United States Alien Property Custodian, a great supply of German-owned cotton, which was purchased for German and Austrian use before 1916 in anticipation of the conclusion of peace before the end of that year, was disposed of by public auction at the New York Cotton Exchange yesterday.

The sale aroused unusual interest on the cotton market, the disposition of enemy cotton stored in New York warehouses for two years having been eagerly awaited by cotton dealers ever since the Alien Property Bureau was established.

More than one hundred agents for cotton mills from all parts of the country were on the floor of the auction room when Joseph A. Bower, head of the business department of the Bureau of Alien Property, opened the sale. Inasmuch as the bidding started on the first lots at the high figure of 20¼ cents a pound, most of the smaller buyers quickly subsided, and the scramble for the stock, amounting to 5,391 bales, was confined to eight buyers, the companies they represented being the Southern Product Company, Rodgers & Co., Weil Brothers & Co., Sorrells & Co., E. P. Walker & Co., Samuel Neuburger & Co., Anderson Clayton & Co., and Harriss, Irby, Vose & Co.

Most of the cotton sold at an average of between 27¾ cents and 28 cents a pound, with about 300 bales going at 29¼ cents a pound. These figures were considered surprisingly high in view of the fact that the current contract price for cotton to be delivered in July is 24 cents a pound. The Business Department of the Alien Property Bureau had not as yet compiled the results of the sale last night, but it was estimated that it brought about $750,000.

At the New York office of the Alien Property Custodian yesterday no information could be had concerning the history of the cotton further than that it had been held in warehouses here for shipment to Germany and Austria, for two or three years. From other authentic sources, however, it was learned that most of this cotton had been assembled along the Atlantic coast before the beginning of the Verdun assaults in 1916, with the understanding on the part of the agents here that it was to be shipped to Austria and Germany about one month after the fall of Verdun, the German and Austrian buyers being apparently assured by their Governments at the time that Verdun would fall, and that peace would inevitably follow within a month.

As Verdun did not fall in accordance with German expectations and as the seas continued to remain closed to German ships the cotton remained in the warehouses until yesterday, when it was disposed of by the Alien Property Custodian to American buyers. In accordance with the regulations in such matters, the office of the Alien Property Custodian would not reveal the names of the original purchasers of the cotton or the banking agents in this country who acted in their behalf when the cotton was assembled in 1915 and 1916.

As early as October, 1915, German and Austrian agents were busy buying cotton and other commodities in this country for shipment after the war, which they expected to end within a year in a complete German victory. The Germans looked further ahead in the matter of safeguarding supplies of this staple than most American manufacturers on the ground. According to reports at that time the diversion of sulphuric acid from the usual market in the fertilizer trade to the picric acid trade meant a lessened yield of cotton in the following year, and it appeared that the Germans, who realized that they would need large quantities of cotton to replenish their own stocks as soon as the war ended, preferred buying and storing it to risking the chance of a sharp advance in price after the sea routes were opened again.

Just how much cotton now stored in warehouses in this country is enemy owned is a matter upon which the Alien Property Custodian has as yet made public no definite information. The report some months ago that the Government was to take over 1,000,000 bales of German owned cotton was received among cotton brokers and members of the Cotton Exchange with incredulity. At that time, there was a total of 83,916 bales of cotton in storage in New York, 725,199 in all of the ports of the United States, and 614,841 bales in interior towns, a total of 1,340,000 bales. That Germans owned 1,000,000 of these bales seemed unbelievable to the trade. Although Germany bought great quantities of cotton at the beginning of the war, men in the trade were inclined to believe that most of it had since been sold and that Germany had certainly not been paying high storage rates on 1,000,000 bales. The 5,391 bales of enemy-owned cotton sold yesterday included practically all of the enemy-owned cotton stored at this port.

FRANCE HAS RIVAL TO FLYING TANK

PROVED IN TRIAL FLIGHTS

Factories Here Are Now Turning Out Liberty Motors in Quantities, Post Tells Engineers.

Speaking before the Society of Municipal Engineers last night at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, Augustus Post, Secretary of the Aerial League of America, who has just returned from the western front, where he studied air fighting methods, said that France soon would place in service a large type of machine which would be a match for the German "flying tank." He said that the French machine was heavily armored and that the plane had performed so well in trials back of the lines that he had been much surprised to learn that the German, rather than the French, flying tank bad been the first to get into actual service. He said that one machine he had seen was capable of bearing the famous French "75" gun.

Brings Messages from France.

Mr. Post prefaced his scheduled paper on the development of air fighting with messages from President Poincaré, Premier Clemenceau, and General Pershing, which, he said, they had asked him to carry to America. President Poincaré's message was:

"Send us aviators like the Lafayette Escadrille and send us airplanes, and the war will end quickly and in a decisive victory."

M. Clemenceau, according to Mr. Post, spoke as follows:

"America has been known for her accomplishments in material things, but from now will be known for what she will do in raising the morale of the world. It will be the American spirit that, permeating the Allies, will bring decisive victory."

General Pershing's message, said Mr. Post, was a request that the country become a unit in support of the men on the firing lines. The General added that persons writing to soldiers should emphasize the loyalty of the nation, thereby heartening the fighttrs.

Liberty Motor Production.

Mr. Post told his audience that he had good authority for the statement that more than 1,000 Liberty motors thus far had passed the Government's test of fifty hours of continuous operation. Mr. Post also said that a factory, the name of which he refused to divulge, had cast, machined, assembled, and put into operation a Liberty motor within sixty days after work was begun.

Discussing the production of airplane motors, Mr. Post said that although manufacturers had been hampered at first by repeated changes in the specifications they had at last received the final design and that the factories now were turning out the motors in quantity. He said that manufacturers had informed him that the peak of motor production should be reached in July and that the facilities of the plants then would be equal to the task of maintaining peak production indefinitely.

He asserted that one pattern of the Liberty motor, as at last approved, weighed only thirty-seven pounds and supplied power capable of lifting an airplane more than 2,000 feet a minute. This capacity, credited to the Liberty motor by Mr. Post, is vastly superior to the power of foreign motors, the best of which have sent machines up 15,000 feet in about eleven minutes, the average performance being approximately 1,000 feet a minute.

Mr. Post's statements were made in response to questions from his audience. Concerning facilities for transporting the completed planes to France, Mr. Post said that airplanes of large size would require space in a ship equal that required for fifty tons of cargo. He added, however, that definite arrangements for the transportation of aircraft abroad had been left to the Shipping Board.

Describes Training Methods.

Mr. Post said that he had watched the training of American aviators at French fields, and that our airmen had become extremely proficient in "group fighting." This, he explained, was flying at the enemy in the form of a V and enveloping him in a circle of aircraft. He paid tribute to the efficiency of the air defenses of Paris, which, he said, had foiled the visits of Zeppelins and made the calls of Gothas infrequent. He said the French capital was girded by anti-aircraft stations well equipped with searchlights, special guns, and microphones, the latter for detecting from afar the hum of an approaching craft.

The speaker also informed his auditors that Allan Ryan, Deputy Police Commissioner, had told him that plans were being formulated to protect this city against hostile raiders. Mr. Post said that the plans contemplated searchlight patrols and all the other protective measures.

The speaker praised the work of the British fleet in the North Sea and the feats of the British Air Service, particularly the "Blimps." Mr. Post said that special inventions on the Blimps permitted the pilots to make out the outlines of a lurking submarine even though the boat was sixty-five feet under water. Many of the submarines, he said, had been captured lately, and in the logs of some of them this entry had occurred frequently: "Forced to submerge because of air patrols."

Mr. Post, in closing, urged that the Air Mail Service be used by business men. He said that air men looked for the establishment of a coast-to-coast mail service after the war, the flight to San Francisco being figured as a three-day trip, allowing time for relays.

TO DISPLAY ITALIAN COLORS

Department Stores Join in Celebration of Italy-America Day.

Department stores in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx will celebrate Italy-America Day tomorrow by displaying the Italian colors, by distributing flags and flowers, and by having special Italy-America programs in their auditoriums.

The last remaining box for the concert at the Metropolitan Opera House tomorow night was sold yesterday to A. Portfolio for $1,100. The concert will close the celebration of Italy-America Day and the proceeds will go to the Italian Red Cross.

A floral automobile parade will be held tomorrow morning, and will pass down Fifth Avenue from Fifty-ninth Street to Washington Square, where there will be an outdoor festival from 7 to 10 P. M. Clarence Whitehill, Forrest Clement, Mme. Peralta, and Lillian Snelling will sing. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia will speak, and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has been invited to make an address.

Calls for Allegiance Pledges.

The latest bulletin issued by the National Canners Association to its members, in addition to giving some interesting facts on sources of credit for the industry, suggests that all employes of canners be made to take an oath of allegiance to the United States. The bulletin contains a form for the purpose and suggests that this action will afford an additional protection and security for goods stored in canners' warehouses. "The form," the bulletin says, "has had the approval of the office of the Quartermaster General of the Army, and it is believed that any person refusing to sign a document of this nature should not be permitted to work in any cannery in the United States during the period of the war."

French Plumes Coming In Strong.

Small French plumes are used as trimmings on many of the "smart" hats now seen here, particularly on small shapes in rough straws with slightly rolled sides and round, broad crowns. The plume is placed either on the side or centre of the crown, with the tip hanging over the brim. Navy, sand, and black are the leading shades at present, though occasionally these colors are seen with contrasting hues. Among the new hats seen here are "Blue Devil" tams, models known as "Anzacs," and white georgette hats, in transparent effects, made on wire frames.

Drug Trade More Active.

There has been an active inquiry here of late for drugs and pharmaceutical chemicals, in spite of numerous price advances, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Stocks continue very limited. Export business in these commodities is expected to improve now that the private ship lines are receiving some encouragement from the Government, which has given assurances that no more vessels will be commandeered except in extreme cases. There has been an advance of $3.50 a pound in refined coumarin, while mercury, in flasks, has fallen off $2. Sodium glycerophosphate has declined 50 cents a pound for crystals. Botanical drugs have advanced again.

Speculators Getting Anxious.

Dealers and others who took "flyers" in staple woolen dress fabrics this season, especially lightweight serges, in the expectation of making tidy profits therefrom, are beginning to doubt the wisdom of their operations, according to reports current locally. The amount of these goods that has appeared on the market since the ending of the Spring wholesale season in women's suits is said to be making more than one of these men somewhat anxious about their holdings and more or less willing to unload at something less than the prices they sought originally. Without going into the question of speculation or concessions, it is a fact that in the Buyers' Wants published in yesterday's TIMES there were sixty offerings of serges, against eight requests for these cloths by buyers.

Women's Sweater Sales Fair.

While the bulk of the advance buying of women's sweaters for Fall already has been done, there is still a fair amount of business being placed in them from day to day. Neither in weave nor in color do the orders differ especially from those placed earlier in the season. Fine Cardigan and fancy "rack" stitches are still among the most actively sought goods, and dainty colors, such as Nile green, turquoise blue, &c., continue to strike the fancy of buyers. Comments differ concerning the sale of sleeveless sweaters for women, but the best indications are that they are not doing as well for Fall as it was thought they would. However, it is said that quite a few of the lighter weight sweaters of this type are being bought for country and beach wear.

Motor Capes Wanted.

Motor coat manufacturers are said to have felt the demand for capes no less than makers of coats for other purposes. Motor capes along distinctly military lines are said to be very actively sought practically everywhere and seem to have proved quite a stimulant to trade. Many of these garments are combinations of sleeveless coats and short capes and are considered very attractive. Navy blue is a popular color, though there are many of the novelty shades, both light and dark, which are having a heavy sale. Leather belts are frequently worn with the sleeveless coat, and the capes are usually held in either with cross belts or with hooks so that the wind will not blow them.

You Never Can Tell.

The story is told of a retailer in the South who, being forced to buy a certain dress which he did not want, found it to be one of his best sellers. He was offered an assortment of dresses at a job price. He liked them all with the exception of this one. But the seller stood firm on his all-or-none offer, and finally the deal was closed for all. The goods reached the buyer's store before he did, and when he finally arrived he was much astonished to learn that the "freak" dress had been sold to the social leader of the town. There subsequently developed a demand for frocks along somewhat similar lines, which proved very profitable to him.

Women's Overalls Selling.

With a constantly increasing number of women throughout the country taking up active outdoor work on the farms, the demand for womens' overalls of every description is reported to be assuming huge proportions. Department stores everywhere are said to be buying these garments in large quantities and to be almost continually sending in substantial duplicate orders. Olive drab seems to be the generally favored color, though grays and blues are also taken. The most popular type seems to be something on the order of bloomers, the trousers being drawn in around the ankle. Many are taken with detachable skirts to be worn to and from work.

Gray Goods Sales Again Small.

Business was again limited in the local gray goods market yesterday, and confined largely to sales of printcloths from first hands. Additional sales of Northern 38½-inch 64-60s, spots, were reported at 19 cents, while for June and July shipment 18½ cents was paid. The latter deliveries were also sold in 38½-inch 60-48s, for which 16 cents was paid. Sheetings and other coarse-yarn goods were again without real feature, largely because of the sold-up condition of most of the mills on these cloths for nearby months and the unwillingness of either buyers or sellers to seek long contract deliveries. Closing spot prices on printcloths were:

| | |
| 39-inch, 80-80s..25c | 38½-inch, 64-60s..19c |
| 39-inch, 68-72s..20½c | 38½-inch, 60-52s..16¼c |

Why Specify Early Delivery?

"Many buyers are ordering early for Fall," said a prominent coat and suit manufacturer yesterday, "and it is right that they should, but why some of them insist on delivery by June 15, or thereabouts, is beyond me. It does not make any particular difference to us, but these fellows not only are thus incurring the expense of storing the garments so ordered, but are tying up a lot of their working capital in this way for several months longer than they need to. This does not seem to me to be good financing, particularly in these times when ready cash is the greatest asset a merchant can have."

NO TRADING IN WOOL.

Uncertainties in the Market Still Exist.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 22.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Because the Government still continues to control the distribution of wool there are no sales to report for the week past. The uncertainties which have been noted in the woolen goods market are still present, and while some believe that certain of the difficult problems will be settled in the comparatively near future, there are many who feel that they will not be settled at all.

"It is becoming more apparent that the amount of goods which will be available from any section of the producing industry will be relatively small for some time to come. Few feel that there will be any great shortage of raw material, but that the inability to operate all the machinery available and other similar conditions, taken together with the large Government requirements, practically will eliminate the production of any large amount of civilian merchandise.

"The cotton futures market for the last week continued at the lower level established on the drop of more than 9 cents a pound culminating May 4. There has been a lack of buying power, exactly as there was a lack of selling during the early Spring, when 35, 40, and even 50 cents a pound was commonly talked of.

"There has been some improvement in the cotton goods market during the last week, and this refers both to the number of sales made and to the prices asked. Unquestionably there is a shortage of goods developing, and the extent of buying will depend largely upon prices and upon the distribution which is noted at retail. Of course, a number of developments could come which would tend to upset prices, but based on a supply and demand basis, there are many styles of goods which unquestionably could be sold at prices higher than those actually noted at the present time. There is a shortage of goods, and this shortage is becoming noticeable because of the Government."

STOP FUSION CASES ON CHARGE OF ERROR

COURT'S STATUS ATTACKED

Election Inspectors Already Serving Sentences Imposed by Justice Goff, Whose Jurisdiction Is Questioned.

All of the work of the Extraordinary Term of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, which includes the conviction of sixty Republican primary election inspectors, now serving terms in the Tombs, and four indictments found against leaders and officers of the Fusion campaign in November, may be declared null and void on the ground that the court was not legally constituted in conformity with the proclamation of Governor Whitman.

The District Attorney and his staff were prepared yesterday to go ahead with the pleadings on the indictments against William Hamlin Childs, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fusion Committee of 1917; ex-State Senator J. T. Newcomb of the Fusion Campaign Committee; ex-Governor William Sulzer, who was a Fusion speaker, and Timothy Healy, active as a Fusion labor leader, when counsel for Mr. Childs served a copy of an Appellate Division order upon Justice Goff and the District Attorney requiring them to show cause why all further legal proceedings should not be prohibited. Argument upon the order is to be heard by the Appellate Division on May 31.

John B. Stanchfield and Isidor J. Kresel, attorneys for Mr. Childs, raised the point that all the proceedings against their client and the others indicted were illegal and void, because the Grand Jury which acted in the matter had no legal existence and Justice Goff, who presided, had no jurisdiction. Counsel for the defense said:

"The only authority that Justice Goff had to impanel the Grand Jury which found the indictments was by virtue of a proclamation of Governor Whitman convening an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court and designating Justice Goff to preside therein. This proclamation was made by the Governor on July 31, 1917, and by that proclamation the Governor directed that notice of the convening of said extraordinary term should be given by publishing the same in The New York Sun and in The Morning Telegraph once in each two successive weeks.

"This order of the Governor was not complied with because the proclamation and notice were not published in The Morning Telegraph once in each of two successive weeks as required. This having been made to appear to the Appellate Division upon voluminous papers submitted to the court the writ of prohibition was issued."

The argument on the order on May 31 will be to determine whether the prohibition shall be made permanent. If a permanent prohibition should follow all the work of investigation of election cases by the Grand Jury and the work of the court which created the jury will be declared illegal and of no effect.

In the proceedings instituted by Judge Delahanty to contest the right of Judge John F. McIntyre to a seat on the bench in General Sessions, a similar legal question was raised and sustained by the Appellate Division. In that case the Governor issued a proclamation convening an Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, directing publication of notice in two newspapers, but it was published in one only. The technical point involved in the present case is that publication was made twice in one week instead of two successive weeks, in The Morning Telegraph.

Most of the sixty Election Inspectors have already served one-half the term of their sentences in the Tombs. Other cases affected include the indictments against ex-State Senator William H. Reynolds, Frank Bailey, Charles A. O'Malley, and William M. Greve, charging alleged conspiracy in the sale of Seaside and Rockaway parks to the city. The cases of three motor cycle policemen, charged with attempted extortion, and three detectives, charged with neglect of duty in connection with the search for the murderer of Ruth Cruger, will be similarly thrown out of court should the District Attorney be unable to convince the higher court of the legality of the proceedings.

"If necessary we will do the work all over again with a new court and jury," said District Attorney Swann yesterday. His office, he said, had nothing to do with the publication of the Governor's proclamation. Usually such publications were ordered direct from Albany, either through the office of the Governor's secretary or by the Secretary of State.

MUST PREVENT BRIBERY BY FOOD DISTRIBUTERS

Administrator Williams Warned by Washington to Make Sure Investigators Are Honest.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams received a communication from the Division of Enforcement of the United States Food Administration at Washington yesterday directing him to take every possible step to prevent any attempt at bribery between food investigators and food distributers. Two cases of bribery or alleged bribery now under investigation in Washington prompted the warning, and the Division of Enforcement points out that "the moral of the whole thing is to use the utmost care" in the selection of representatives, to retain control of their actions, and to "see that the public understands that every decision depends on the facts ascertained by disinterested and competent and honest representatives."

The Federal Food Board announced yesterday that the Food Administration had approve the following decision in the case of Hyman Sklamberg, a wholesale grocer at 71 Ludlow Street: That beginning Tuesday, May 28, Sklamberg's business shall be suspended for thirty days, and for thirty days more he shall not be permited to sell sugar. Sklamberg, whose wholesale grocery business amounted to $1,000,000 a year, had exacted 11, and even 15, cents a pound for granulated sugar. The testimony also showed that he persistently compelled customers to purchase commodities for which they had no use. Although the rule of the Food Administration prohibited any wholesale grocer from selling more than a thousand pounds of sugar at one time, Sklamberg sold 3,500 pounds of granulated and cube sugar in one transaction to a firm in Connecticut.

The Federal Food Board made public a report yesterday showing that the United States consumed in the first year of the war, April, 1917, to April, 1918, 4,109,291 tons of sugar, or 8,218,582,000 pounds. The wholesale price of refined sugar in the United States at the present time is $7.30 per 100 pounds. The regulated wholesale price in Canada is $8.07 per 100 pounds; in the United Kingdom, $12.28, and in Italy, $26.30.

Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover will visit the Milk and Dairy Farm Exposition in the Grand Central Palace today and will make an address at 2 P. M. at the joint meeting of delegates of the Dairymen's League and other organizations in the auditorium. Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, will also speak.

GRACE LUSK ON THE STAND.

Tells of Her Luck and How She First Met Dr. Roberts.

WAUKESHA, Wis., May 22.—Grace Lusk took the witness stand late this afternoon at her trial for slaying Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts and revealed details of her life up to the time she first met Dr. David Roberts.

Miss Lusk said that she first met Dr. Roberts at a dinner party which he attended with his wife early in 1913. Later they met at church sociables which Dr. Roberts attended with his wife. She described her health during this period as poor, due largely to overwork, and declared that she was frequently unable to attend to her duties because of severe headaches.

In the early part of the day a score of character witnesses testified to the high reputation borne by the defendant. Evidence was also introduced to show that her grandmother had been the inmate of an insane asylum at one time. Court adjourned after Miss Lusk had been on the stand an hour.

WILL OF RICARDO NARGANES

Cuban Who Lived Here for Years Left Million to Children.

The will of Ricardo Narganes, member of a well-known Cuban family, who lived here for some years and died on Oct. 3 last, disposes of an estate of more than $1,000,000, the bulk of which went to his five children. In his will he refers to his deceased wife as "model wife and mother, whose death caused me immense suffering." Concerning ex-Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, with whom he had been associated in the sale of tobacco holdings to the American Tobacco Company, the testator said, "My great confidence in the honesty and justice of R. A. C. Smith, long my friend, has been my motive for not completing the settlement of transactions in which we were both interested."

The testator gave $10,000 for the education of his godchild, Rodolpho Ricardo Davis, and $1,000 to the boy's mother.

LEWIS IS IN FIGHT TO STAY, HE SAYS

"I Am Not the Stalking Horse for Anybody," Declares Attorney General.

WANTS TO DEFEAT WHITMAN

Denies He Is Candidate of William Barnes and Says Republicans Are Dissatisfied with Governor.

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who recently announced that he would be a candidate against Governor Whitman in the Republican primaries for the nomination for Governor, in an interview at the Murray Hill Hotel last night made short work of recent reports which had it that he would drop out and give way to another candidate on whom the opposition to the Governor could centre.

"There is not the slightest likelihood of my withdrawal as a candidate," said the Attorney General. "I am in this fight to stay. I am not the stalking horse for anybody. All my cards are on the table. I am in this fight to give the voters, be they few or many, in the Republican primaries a chance to vote for a man who thinks as they do upon questions which now occupy public attention."

According to reports that have been current in Republican circles for many days, even the supporters of the Attorney General's candidacy had taken exception to his statement that he would not to make a rough and tumble fight in the primaries for the Gubernatorial nomination. They wanted a man who would be willing to make an aggressive fight, the reports had it.

"I have not changed my plans in that respect," said Mr. Lewis. "I have sworn to perform certain duties in the Attorney General's office faithfully and to the limit of my ability. I cannot do that and at the same go about the State and make speeches in support of my own candidacy. I will leave that sort of campaigning to the Governor. As far as I am concerned I do not intend to parade my merits on the stump."

Mr. Lewis modified his statement by declaring that he might make one speech either in this city or in Rochester, his home, immediately before the primaries, but that would be all. Commenting on a report that he was regarded as the candidate of William Barnes, former Republican State Chairman, who is bitterly opposed politically to Governor Whitman, Mr. Lewis said:

"I am not the candidate of any individual. I did not ask the permission of any political leader, not even the leader of my own home district, before I announced my candidacy. I do not want to be understood as saying that in an offensive sense, but merely to emphasize that I am making my appeal to the Republican voters in the primaries and not to the leaders. I have up in Albany a stack of letters so high"—Mr. Lewis marked off with his hand a distance of approximately four feet from the ground—"from substantial citizens of prominence in the Republican Party urging me to become a candidate."

Mr. Lewis said there was widespread dissatisfaction among Republicans up State with Governor Whitman, a feeling that he should be defeated for renomination, and that, if nominated, he could not win.

"I am in this fight to defeat Governor Whitman," said the Attorney General.

While many of Mr. Lewis's supporters are preparing to make a fight for an unofficial State convention as the only medium through which a party platform can be promulgated, the Attorney General said that he was not particular whether one was held or not, or whether a platform was adopted or not. Republican State Chairman George A. Glynn has voiced an opinion that the "only platform needed is the record of Governor Whitman."

"I am quite willing to oppose him with no other platform than that," said Mr. Lewis with a laugh. "I certainly shall do nothing to urge the adoption of another. I know what my platform is, and in a spirit of frankness which I think should characterize the course of any candidate for public office in times as serious as these have taken the voters into my confidence, so I am sure they know where I stand."

Mr. Lewis came to the city in connection with the hearings now being conducted in the Attorney General's office in this city on the report of ammunition and fire arms secretly hoarded in this country by agents of the Central Powers. He returned to Albany last night.

KINGDON GOULD AN OFFICER

He Is Now a First Lieutenant in the Interpreters' Corps.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., May 22.—Notwithstanding the fact that he recently declined an appointment to the division officers' training camp, with its opportunity to win a commission, Kingdon Gould, son of George J. Gould, who has been on duty with the 78th Division Intelligence Department for several months, has been promoted by a War Department order to the rank of First Lieutenant in the Interpreters' Corps. From private Gould had risen to the rank of Battalion Sergeant Major of the Headquarters Troop. He speaks five languages and can read and write seven.

Continued failure of the authorities and citizens of Wrightstown to make the town sanitary induced Major Gen. Scott to issue an order today forbidding officers and enlisted men to enter the town after 6 o'clock tomorrow morning. The town has been frequented daily by thousands of soldiers and visitors, and the new stores and other business establishments which have sprung up to cater to these crowds represent investments of more than $500,000. Major Gen. Scott explained that the order had been issued only after repeated failures of sanitary officers to get Wrightstown citizens to improve the town. The need for improvements, he said, had been called to their attention in February. The ban would be lifted, he added, only when the demands of the Sanitary Corps are met.

"Wets" and "Drys" Win in Jersey.

ROSELLE, N. J., May 22.—In the local option elections at Roselle and Roselle Park yesterday both the "wets" and "drys" gained victories. In Roselle Park the "wets" won by 390 to 295, while the "drys" were victorious in Roselle by 273 to 258.

Labor Men Uphold Hutchinson.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., May 22.—The delegates to the annual convention of the New Jersey State Building Trades Council voted today to uphold the stand of President Hutchinson of the Carpenters and Joiners' Union against the agreement of the American Federation of Labor with the Government. This agreement provides that in districts dominated by union labor union shops should be maintained in plants doing war work, while in territory only partly organized the open shop should be permitted.

Fines a Justice of the Peace.

Justice of the Peace John L. Coward of Port Chester appeared yesterday in the Traffic Court and was fined $25 for speeding in Broadway. Patrolman Larkin timed Mr. Coward on Saturday from 157th to 161st Street and made a charge of traveling thirty-seven miles an hour against him. Mr. Coward admitted the truth of the charge and told Magistrate House that he was in a hurry.

WHITMAN AFTER LOAFERS.

Announces State Law Will Be Enforced Rigidly on June 1.

ALBANY, May 22.—New York's anti-loafing law will be made effective on June 1 by proclamation of Governor Whitman. The Governor announced his proposed action today in a formal statement.

"After June 1, and during the period of the war," the statement says, "New York State will not afford a haven to idlers and loafers. It will be incumbent upon every able-bodied male person between the ages of 18 and 50 to perform some useful work. The State Industrial Commission will co-operate with the Sheriffs, the State police, and other peace officers throughout the State to find the unemployed and to assign them to jobs which they must fill.

"Owing to the necessity of getting the proper machinery organized and proper forms printed and distributed to the enforcing officers, I am advised that it will not be practicable to put the law into effect before June 1.

"It will be no defense to any one seeking to avoid work to show that he has sufficient income or means to live without work. The State has a right to the productive labor of all its citizens.

"Employers should also realize that their needs cannot be met unless they make them known. I hope, therefore, that employers of labor of all kinds will promptly communicate to the nearest office of the public employment bureau or to the Sheriff of the county their requirements for labor in order that labor may be furnished by them through the registrations of men now out of employment. The State can act merely as the agent between the employer and person seeking employment. Unless employrs co-operate with the State in its efforts much of the available labor will go unused."

MORE IRISH ARRESTS IN PLOT ROUND-UP

M. P.'S TO END ABSTENTION

German Agents Said to be in Ireland Now—Dillon Checks Extremists —Aid Sought Here.

LONDON, May 22.—Indications that the Government has not yet completed all the Irish arrests contemplated by it are seen in the apprehension in Dublin late last night of P. F. Burke, the leading Sinn Feiner in the County of Monaghan. A number of Sinn Fein leaders in various districts, after the coup was made in Dublin, evaded the police, who are still on the lookout for them.

The authorities are directing their attention to all persons who are regarded as suspicious, and such men are being stopped in the neighborhood of Dublin and searched. All the best-known men of what is regarded as the revolutionary wing of the Sinn Fein are already in custody, but there is a general impression that many influential participators in the alleged conspiracy are persons never heard of by the Irish public.

Suggests Leaders May Be Dupes.

A leading Nationalist said today to The Associated Press:

"I believe that there are undoubtedly German agents in active operation in Ireland and that they operate at fourth or fifth hand, so that even the Sinn Fein leaders, who think they know everything, are quite possibly the dupes of knaves in the background.

"You must not forget that until the outbreak of the war Sir Roger Casement was a very inconspicuous figure in Irish life and had no prominent association with any Irish movement. There may be half a dozen Casements as little open to apparent suspicion as he then was. All Ireland knew of him was that he was an ex-official of the Foreign Office."

The order for the internment of Sinn Feiners taken in custody, according to a Times dispatch from Dublin, states that if, within seven days from the date of the serving of the internment order, any interned person makes any representation to the Chief Secretary it will be referred to the Advisory Committee which deals with the internment of aliens, and will be considered.

Widow of T. J. Clark Arrested.

DUBLIN, May 22. — Mrs. Thomas J. Clark, whose husband was put to death for the part he took in the Irish uprising in 1916, was arrested today.

A further consignment of Sinn Fein prisoners has left Dublin on the way to England. The group was not one of newly arrested persons, it was stated, but merely a small number who had been heretofore detained at local barracks. According to the local newspapers, Count Plunkett was the only prominent person in the party. There was no demonstration at the dock, as the police officials had been careful to conceal the arrangements for the prisoners' departure from the public.

The Mansion House Anti-Conscription Conference resumed its sittings today, and after a session of two hours adjourned until tomorrow, when a further statement will be issued. It was as the delegate of this conference that the Lord Mayor of Dublin was to proceed to Washington to present to President Wilson a document framed by the conference as a statement of the case of Ireland against conscription. His departure, which already has been considerably delayed, is now further deferred.

A possible hitch in the arrangements for the Mayor's visit to Washington is being discussed in political circles of Dublin. It is held to be illegal under the defense of the Realm act.

The Associated Press correspondent, upon visiting the office of Chief Secretary Shortt in Dublin Castle, found the main entrance gate of the castle closed and bolted. Entrance is now only obtainable by a side street. Inside the castle offices there was bustle and activity throughout the day. Orderlies and dispatch riders were much in evidence, and this led to rumors of further arrests. These rumors appeared to be without foundation in fact, but the correspondent learned that there remains a considerable list of "suspects" who may be taken into custody at any time.

Belfast and Cork Precautions.

Among those early at work at the castle were Viscount French and Major Gen. Shaw, the Commander in Chief, as well as representatives of the military from the Cork and Belfast commands and the heads of the Dublin police and Royal Irish Constabulary. Considerable significance was attached to the calling into conference here of the military chiefs from Belfast and Cork.

The Irish Party's policy of temporary abstention from attendance in Parliament is expected to come to an end as soon as the House of Commons resumes its sittings. Many of the experienced representatives of the party in the House were opposed even to the temporary adoption of this Sinn Fein method.

DILLON REBUKE TO SINN FEIN.

Appeal for American Support of Irish Nationalists.

DUBLIN, May 21.—An appeal to all those of Irish blood in the United States to support the Nationalist Party as "the one party in Ireland which is fighting for Irish liberty without betraying the cause of liberty in other lands" was made today by John Dillon, the Nationalist leader, in an interview with The Associated Press correspondent. [A brief summary of the interview was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday.]

Mr. Dillon, in this interview, denounced the policy of the Sinn Fein, while arraigning the methods which the British Government had pursued in dealing with the Irish question. After calling attention to the importance of the American public being fully informed of the Irish situation at the present time, he said:

"The Irish Party, at a special meeting held on Thursday of last week, issued a statement from which the following is an extract:

> All the machinery of propaganda controlled by the British Government has been set in motion to blacken the name of Ireland in America and to prejudice the American people and the American Government against the Irish nation. We feel it our duty, as the elected representatives of the Irish nation, to appeal most earnestly to the people of America and the American Government not to be deceived by these propagandist misrepresentations, but to listen to the statement of Ireland's case coming from Irishmen in sympathy with the national aspiration of the people of Ireland and qualified to speak on behalf of the Irish nation.

"At the time the above statement was issued none of us had the slightest information of the intended coup of the Government, but justification for our warning came with dramatic rapidity.

"It is difficult to understand why the Government took action at this particular moment, and why, in Lord French's proclamation, the alleged German plot should be mixed up with conscription, unless on the assumption that the main purpose in the mind of the Government just now is to poison American opinion against the Irish nation.

"The charge made in Lord French's proclamation against the Sinn Fein prisoners is an extremely serious one, and the method adopted by the Government is, so far as I know, unprecedented in British history. They have arrested and deported these men to England without any definite charge being made in legal form against them and without any statement as to whether it is intended to bring them to trial or not. Meanwhile Ireland waits for proof of the alleged pro-German plot.

"For the last three years the British Government and Sir Edward Carson have done the work of Germany in Ireland more effectively than any other agencies that I know of. Three years ago Ireland was in the war with as much enthusiasm as any of the allied nations, and had sent to the front a full proportion of her people as compared with Great Britain or the dominions of the Crown, and Irish soldiers had been in the van of the battle and the post of danger on every one of the Allies' fronts.

"All that has been changed by what Mr. Lloyd George himself was obliged to describe, when Minister of War, as 'stupidity amounting to malignity' on the part of the War Office and the Government.

"Now, I admit that the situation in Ireland is gloomy in the extreme. My attention has been directed to statements that I and the Irish Party of which I am leader have adopted Sinn Fein methods and have joined the Sinn Fein Party. These statements are utterly unfounded and false. So far from that being the case, I am more than ever convinced that the policy of the Sinn Fein is wrong and foolish and bound to end in defeat and disaster.

"Even during the last three weeks, while in the Mansion House conference the Sinn Fein leaders co-operated with us in resisting the enforcement of conscription in Ireland by the British Parliament, they absolutely refused to agree to a party truce, and continued to denounce us because we still believed in constitutional methods; because we aim at a settlement based on full freedom and self-government for Ireland under a friendly settlement with Great Britain, and because we still adhere to the declaration of John Redmond at the outbreak of the war, and believe that the cause of the Allies is the cause of freedom throughout the world.

"The two great forces which have been the root and cause of all of Ireland's trouble in recent years have been, on the one side, the stupidity and insincerity of the British Government, which has absolutely refused under the dictation of Sir Edward Carson to apply in Ireland the principles for which the Allies are fighting in Europe, and, secondly, the unlimited financial resources supplied to the Sinn Fein from New York.

"Therefore, I feel justified in making an urgent appeal to all those of Irish blood in the United States to support the one party in Ireland which is fighting for Irish liberty without betraying the cause of liberty in other lands."

FACTIONS SEEK SUPPORT HERE.

Nationalist Organs Spurn Charge That Ireland Is Pro-German.

DUBLIN, May 22.—"What does America think?" is the question which all schools of Irish opinion have been asking since the arrests of Sinn Fein leaders on Saturday morning. Every faction, in its press, claims the support of American opinion and each section quotes freely whatever American comment it can collect in support of its own particular viewpoint.

Not a single one of today's papers, whether Unionist or Nationalist, omits referring to the American attitude in long leading articles. The Freeman's Journal, the official organ of the Irish Party, heads its editorial page with the following:

"An effort to stampede American opinion has been completely foiled. There is a complete suspension of judgment in America on the charge of pro-German conspiracy against the men arrested. Warnings have been given that proof must be quickly forthcoming or America will come to the conclusion that the plot, if there is a plot, is not a pro-German one."

The Dublin Independent, in a long editorial, accuses the Government of making the arrests "with a view to turning American opinion against Ireland and preventing the Lord Mayor of Dublin, as Ireland's representative, from receiving a fair hearing at Washington. The proclamation of Field Marshal French had scarcely been cabled when there came back quotations from the American press based on the assumption that the story of a German plot was true."

The Dublin correspondent of The London Daily News writes:

"The pivot of the Irish front is in Washington. Dublin is enjoying an unexampled invasion by American newspaper men, and any one who sees the way they go about their work must admit their serious purpose and their open-mindedness to impressions. They have a voracious appetite for the opinions of people who really count and are serving humanity well by sending the facts across the water."

Denis Kilbride, member of Parliament from South Kildare and one of the oldest members of the Irish Party, in a speech to his constituents last night urged Irishmen to put their case against conscription before the American public, which, he said, would judge it justly.

"The tenor of recent comment from America," he said, "is that Americans cannot understand why Irishmen oppose conscription, in view of the fact that conscription is now a fact in the United States. The answer is obvious. If Irishmen are to be conscripted, it is the Irish themselves who should carry it out. It was the people of the United States who imposed conscription there, and Americans would rise in revolt against any other people dictating to them."

The events of the last few days have not drawn as much support to the Sinn Feiners as they expected from the more moderate Irish parties. Indeed, there are indications that the feud between the Sinn Feiners and the Nationalists has only grown more bitter. The Nationalists consider that the Sinn Feiners, by their revolutionary tactics, are spoiling Ireland's best chance of a satisfactory settlement.

If the Sinn Feiners expected that the arrests of their leaders would draw the Nationalists over to the Sinn Fein side they are evidently destined to experience serious disappointment. Indications that the Nationalist Party is preparing to repudiate in the most emphatic way the revolutionary spirit of the Sinn Fein may be found in an editorial in The Evening Telegraph, an official organ of the Nationalists.

"If the Sinn Fein leaders," says this organ, "are guilty of the crime of allowing Ireland to be made a pawn in the game of the Prussian Junkers they will be repudiated and denounced by Nationalist Ireland. If they entered into negotiations with the power which trampled Belgium in the mire, enslaved Poland, brought ruin to Russia, and now threatens to impose a militarist despotism on all the small nations of Europe, the resentment of the Irish people will make itself felt in a most emphatic way.

"Ireland is not and never has been pro-German. Irishmen believe that right and justice are on the side of the Allies. Our people do not forget that hundreds of thousands of their own kith and kin are fighting against the menace of German domination. They would regard any plot or intrigue with Germany as treason to Ireland and treachery to every Irish soldier who has joined the ranks because he believed he was helping to free Ireland. But they are not prepared to swallow vague stories of a German conspiracy without some evidence to sustain the charges."

The Nationalist newspapers in general display unusual caution in dealing with the manifesto issued by the Mansion House conference. The Cork Examiner, an influential Nationalist paper, says:

"The wholesale arrests convey the idea that Ireland has suddenly become pro-German, which clearly is not the fact, as Lord French and his advisers well know. The circumstances of the arrest look singularly like a deep-laid plot against home rule."

"Though the manifesto would imply that there is no foundation for the charge of a conspiracy in Ireland to enter into treasonable communication with the German enemy, it is significant that the charge is not repudiated in specific terms. The members of the conference no doubt realize that if such a plot exists—and no Government would say that it did if it did not, for not even the most shop-soiled of political reputations would survive such a scandal—they must carefully consider their duty and obligations."

THROWN HIGH IN AIR WHEN MAIN BURSTS

WATER POURS INTO TUBE

Goods in Near-by Cellars Set Afloat —Old Subway Escapes Damage and Trains Are Not Delayed.

The lives of five men who were working in the new Seventh Avenue subway under Times Square, about forty feet north of The Times Building, were endangered at 2:25 o'clock this morning when a twelve-inch water main burst and tons of water poured into the cutting. The force of the water was so great that one man was thrown high into the air, but he escaped serious injury. The men working with him were not hurt.

Foremen said that the five workmen were swinging a heavy girder into the new tunnel and that the end of the piece of steel struck the water main and broke it. The man who was nearest the girder was caught in the sudden spurt of water and before those with him could save him he was forced through the wooden covering of the tunnel.

The geyser from the broken main shot through the opening in the street and formed a fountain about forty feet high that drenched persons who were passing the subway kiosk north of THE TIMES Building. Within a few minutes the water had flooded Broadway and part of Forty-third Street and had overflowed the curb at THE TIMES Building. The cellars of the Wallick's Hotel on the northeast corner of Forty-third Street and Broadway and other buildings nearby wee flooded with water, but the stream did not reach the old subway tunnel or the Times Square subway station.

All trolley traffic on the Broadway lines was tied up for about an hour and police lines were thrown around The Times Building to prevent the crowds from getting dangerously near the broken pipe. After the geyser had been playing for about fifteen minutes gangs from the Department of Water Supply got to one of the headgate chambers and shut off the main. It was said that the damage to the new subway would be slight, and that the water would be pumped out in a few hours so that work could be resumed.

Although the men who were in the tunnel escaped with a drenching, the police learned that the man who had been hurled upward with the geyser suffered slight injuries, but these were not serious enough to cause his removal to the hospital. The other men were knocked down in their efforts to escape, but all were able to resume work in the tunnel.

Gangs were sent into build dikes there to prevent the flow of water north in the tunnel, and pumps were set to work immediately.

Broken Hip Costs Church $5,000.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Goff returned a verdict yesterday for $5,000 in a suit of Mary A. Daly against the Trinity Church Corporation. The plaintiff sued for $25,000 on the ground that she fell and broke her hip while crossing an unlighted driveway leading to Trinity Cemetery, at 155th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The defense was that the City of New York was responsible for the darkened condition of the street, but Assistant Corporation Counsel Curtis contended that the Trinity Corporation had constructed the driveway across the sidewalk in a negligent manner and was liable.

OFFERS BIG HOSPITAL HERE.

Beth Israel Ready to Erect Institution for Army or Navy.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—On behalf of the Beth Israel Hospital in New York, Representative Siegel of New York today offered to the War and Navy Departments to erect a $1,250,000 hospital for either department, on the square block in New York City bounded by Second Avenue, Livingston Place, and Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets.

The hospital would be equipped with 500 beds. The Government would have sole use and control of it during the war, or afterward.

The offer made through Representative Siegel is for the erection of a fifteen-story hospital building. Funds for the construction are available, and as soon as the offer is accepted work will begin. After the war the building will be taken over by the hospital.

"It had been the plan of the trustees for several years to build a new hospital building, and the plans and finances have been ready for several months," said Louis J. Frank, the superintendent of Beth Israel Hospital now at Jefferson and Cherry Streets. "Our plans were held up by the war, because we thought it would be a patriotic duty not to take the materials needed for the construction of ships, shipyards, and munitions. When we learned that the Government would need many new hospitals we thought it would be patriotic to offer to build this hospital now and turn over the building for the duration of the war, or for such a period as it needed it.

"This would give the Government a hospital at practically no cost to it. The building could be put up in a few months if the material could be spared. I suppose the Government would give some aid in rushing the construction if the building were needed badly. When the Government has no more use for the building the Beth Israel Association would take it back, but we would retain our building in Cherry Street as an adjunct to the new hospital."

OFFICERS' CAMPS ARE SHORT

Room for 4,500 More Men in the Various Training Centres.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Reports received at the War Department today from commanders of a fourth series of reserve officers' training camps show a total attendance materially below that expected. Fewer than 12,000 men have reported for instruction, although provision had been made for 16,500.

The fact that national army divisions are far below their proper strength is given as the reason for the failure of the camps to reach the size desired. It is probable that authority for supplemental selections will be given to division commanders.

SUBWAY STRIKE PLAN.

Men on New Tubes Will Quit on June 1 Unless Pay Is Increased.

The report that all work on the new subways would stop on June 1 unless the demands of the men for increased pay was granted was confirmed last night at a meeting held at 154 East Fifty-fourth Street by the labor unions embracing all employes of the subway contractors. A resolution was adopted that the men would quit on June 1 unless the increased wages asked for were granted from May 15.

Michael Carraher, Secretary of the International Union of Tunnel Subway Constructors, said last night that it would be impossible to keep the men at work after the first of the month unless their demands were met. He added that if the men went out they would go to better paid work, and it would be impossible to fill their places, because of the stringent labor market.
